Blair in arms and artillery build-up

2,000 extra troops set for Kosovo

By Michael Evans, Philip Webster and Charles Bremner

BRITAIN is sending a further 2,000 troops, with tanks and artillery, to Macedonia to be part of an international force for eventual deployment in Announcing the armoured battle group reinforcement in the Commons, Tony Blair said the extra troops were not being sent to invade Kosovo, but to be ready to implement a peace settlement.

The decision to send the 2,000 troops, backed by 14 Challenger tanks, 40 Warrior armoured vehicles and six AS90 self-propelled guns, will raise the British military presence in Macedonia to more than 6,300.

While the deployment of the Irish Guards battle group which will take up to 30 days, was intended to send a signal to Belgrade that Nato was still determined to form the core of an international peace force for Kosovo, the commander in charge of the alliance air cam-paign announced that he had asked for 300 more American aircraft, to bring the total 1,000. Other Nato countries have also been asked to send more aircraft.

Last night the Pentagon said that the request from General Wesley Clark, Nato's Supreme Allied Commander, was being considered seriously. The aircraft he wants include more Flós, Fl5s, AlO "tank-busters", radar-jamming EA6B Prowlers and refuelling tankers to allow bomber pilots to stay in the air over Yugoslavia for longer periods, while hunting for Serb forces and armour in

The US already has 500 air-craft committed to Operation Allied Force. The proposed increase in the number of American aircraft in the region may require President Clinton to call up members of the National Guard and Reserve. Other effort came on the day that Serb troops carried out a deliberately provocative incursion over the Kosovo border into Albania. Although Belgrade denied any such incident, Serb troops exchanged gunfire with Albanian border forces and occupied the village of Kamenica, more than a mile inside Albania. The occupation lasted a few hours before the Serb forces withdrew. Nato warned earli-er this week that it would treat any border incursions with the 'utmost seriousness".

The extra British troops being sent to Macedonia will mean that Nato forces in the country will total 14,000. The first elements of an 8,000-man Nato force to help refugees has also begun to arrive in Alba-nia. The second British battle group will be based on the Irish Guards, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Bill Cubitt, currently based in Germany.

There will also be elements from the Green Howards, the King's Royal Hussars, 4 Regiment Field Artillery and a 150-man armoured reconnaissance squadron from the Windsor-based Household Cavalry Regiment, equipped with 20 armoured vehicles, mostly Scimitars. Another key element will be from 32 Regiment Royal Engineers, equipped with mine-clearance and bridging vehicles. The heavy armour will be sent by ship from the German port of Emden to Salonika, in Greece.

Although the reinforcement will double the number of British tanks, self-propelled guns and Warriors in Macedonia, Ministry of Defence sources said the battle group was con-figured only for enforcing peace, not for military intervention in Kosovo.

Underlining this point in the Commons, the Prime Minister said: "They are being sent so that the UK can be in a position to play our proper role in the international effort to ensure the refugees are able to return to Kosovo in safety."

However, questioned by Paddy Ashdown, the Liberal Democrat leader, Mr Blair promised that Nato would not wait for permission from President Milosevic to enter Kosovo. "It's not a question of Mi-losevic having a veto," he said. He also insisted that a politi-cal settlement would have to be based on the Rambouillet accord, which Belgrade had refused to sign because of Nato insistence on sending an implementation force into Kosovo. "It must be a settlement that brings lasting peace to the entire region," he said, emphasis-

Barclays' £7m chief quits on day one

MIKE O'NEILL, the Ameri-can banker hired as chief executive of Barclays two months ago, has quit after just one day in the office for health reasons (Caroline Merrell writes).

Mr O'Neill, 52, passed out in California last Wednesday after a bout of flu and his doctors found that he had a heart condition that could become dangerous if he was put under stress. Doctors in London confirmed the diagnosis on Monday, his first day with Barclays, and he quit yesterday. Mr O'Neill had a contract worth £7 million over three years. But in the end he received nothing.

He said: "I am deeply disappointed to give up what was for me the dream appointment and the culmination of my whole career. Though the condition that has been diagnosed is not life-threatening. I have concluded that it would be unwise to take up this appointment." The bank will now reconsider some of the candidates who were beaten to the job by Mr O'Neill

The immediate threat comes from the stream of revelations from his former wife. Cricket caught out by a snowball

BY ADAM SHERWIN

SNOW stopped play on the opening day of the county cricket season yesterday. That is not quite as freakish as it seems. Last year the opening fixtures saw scarcely any action, but it was the second day before rain turned to snow. This year play was cancelled between Durham and Worcestershire as 2in of snow fell on the Riverside ground in Chester-le-Street. In the other four matches only a handful of overs were bowled as cricketers and ground staff battled with rain, sleet, thunder and bad light.

Weathermen are inclined to blame the cricketers, pointing out that the season, which has started in mid-April for a decade, used to get under way only at the end of the month. Many Aprils, like 1998, 1989.

1986, 1983, 1981, 1979 and so on were so cold, miserable and thoroughly waterlogged that they gave cricketers and the sun no chance to shine. .

In 1997 Northamptonshire were snowed off on May 7. In 1976, notoriously, it snowed on cricketers on June 2, but that

IT is outnumbered, battered and fragmented in the face of Serb onslaughts, but the Kosovo Liberation Army is in no mood to surrender. Hitherto, the KLA has been a group whose international renown has far outstripped its effectiveness — hardly surprising when its fighting men go to war on a donkey. esterday they boosted their profile in America where almost 3,000 citizens are leaving to fight in their homeland. Grey-moustachioed men of 60 stand shoulder to shoulder with blonde women of 16 and 17, displaying a pride in their Albanian roots which has convinced them to forsake their lives in America and fight to the death against the Yugoslav Army and paramilitary troops. Thousands of

with no military training, are volunteering to join the KLA and wage guerrilla war on the oppressors of a homeland many have never seen. "My sisters are getting raped and my brothers getting killed. My father is already over there fighting and I want to go too," said Linda Muriqi, 16, as she signed up with 300 others at a New York rally. They were flying to Tirana three weeks before trying to join the KLA's struggle. Isa Kodra, a 19-year-old a student and a National Guard platoon sergeant, will help. "Maybe I can help save what is left of Kosovo. The reality is Nato will only respond when they see body bags. We will fill those body bags if necessary."

Ulster prisoner releases may be halted

BY MARTIN FLETCHER, CHIEF IRELAND CORRESPONDENT

THE Government may be forced to consider halting prisoner releases if the Northern Ireland peace process has to be suspended because of the deadlock over IRA arms.

That would not only jeopard-ise the scheduled releases of such figures as the Brighton bomber Patrick Magee and the Ulster Freedom Fighters commander Johnny Adair, but also increase the likelihood of the Good Friday accord unravelling during a summer of contentious parades and European elections.

Government sources conceded the possibility after another fruitless day of talks at Stormont and Sinn Fein's formal rejection of the Hillsborough declaration yesterday. Conservatives and Unionists have long demanded that the releases be halted in the absence of IRA disarmament and one source said: "If this doesn't work then the Government will be asked with more and more insistence why these releases are continuing.

To date 257 convicted terrorists have been freed on licence, but almost as many remain inside. Only yesterday, the fourstrong Balcombe Street gang that terrorised London in the 1970s were released. The parties returned from a 12-day Easter break yesterday with no radical new ideas fo breaking the impasse caused by Sinn Fein's inability to deliver the IRA disarmament required by David Trimble.

Sinn Fein rejected the compromise proposed by the Brit-ish and Irish Prime Ministers on April 1 as a "rewriting of the accord" and Gerry Adams said: "None of us should underestimate the crisis which we're now in."

Railways are worse now than under BR By ARTHUR LEATHLEY, TRANSPORT CORRESPONDENT

THE railways are in a worse condition than they were under British Rail, according to a critical government report on Railtrack's first four years.

Railtrack, Britain's biggest rail company. is blamed for under spending on replacing worn-out parts of the system and for risking long-term deterioration of the network. The company is also accused of spending heavily on shortterm improvements but failing to invest sufficiently in changes that would bring long-term benefits.

Huge variations exist between regions in the quality of the network, the report says, with the Midlands and West Country faring worst, and Scotland and southeast England doing best.

John Prescott, the Transport Secretary, said that the report painted a "sorry picture of Rail-track's performance". He indicated that stricter regulation would be introduced and subsidies to the company would be controlled more tightly. In addition, Railtrack faces the likely imposition of hefty fines if it fails to meet targets for improving train delays. It barely achieved half of last year's targets. However, Railtrack defended its record and said that many of the failings had been in its first two years before it was privarised in 1996.The company, which makes a profit of more than £1 million a day, said the report had pointed out many improvements. It warned Mr Prescott that righter regulation could jeopardise its ability to carry out a £27 billion investment programme over the next ten years.

The independent study of Railtrack investment, by the international consultants Booz-Allen and Hamilton, is the most comprehensive carried out. It concludes that that the company's performance in renewing the network has been below expectations".

Although the report says that renewal of track has been better than expected, changes to other crucial parts of the network had fallen short of inidal targets. Planned major signalling schemes had been re-placed by remedial work. It says that, in the first two years. Railtrack made huge improvements in cutting the number of train delays attibutable to its own faults and those by contractors, but since then has made little progress. Gerald Corbett, Railtrack's chief executive, said: "We accept many of the criticisms but the report does say we have improved punctuality. If polidcians want a regime in which they have greater control, they investment that we now offer. There are big problems in performance but our investment are many good things happening and Mr Prescott must not throw out the baby with the

STRAW TACKLES PROBATION SERVICE

Jack Straw has criticised the Probation Service for failing to take tough action on offenders who miss interviews. The Home Secretary said it was difficult to understand why offenders were able to miss three interviews before breach action was triggered. In an effort to get rid of the public impression that community sentences are soft, the community service order is to be renamed the criminal work order and a probation order is expected to become the community supervision order. Sir David blames the management of the service and the Prison Officers' Association for the existing state of industrial relations.

He hopes that the changes can be implemented throughout the service without a battle in which a lot of people are wounded, although most senior prison governors would disagree because of the power of the Prison Officers' Association and its capacity to cause firmed Anglophile, having spent seven years here as a banking consultant. At only 52, Mr O'Neill saw the job as the pinnacle of his career, and Barclays saw him as its saviour.

Unfortunately, those twin ambitions suffered a sudden reversal when Mr O'Neill had a severe bout of flu. He delayed his arrival in London, originally scheduled for March 26, and then, last Wednesday, he collapsed in California.

After extensive tests in America, he was found to have an arrhythmic (irregular) heartbeat. According to the US doctors, the condition could worsen under stressful conditions. They advised him against continuing with the Barclays job.

He immediately contacted Sir Peter Middleton, the group chief executive, who has been standing in since the departure of Mr Taylor. Sir Peter was understandably alarmed and advised Mr O'Neill to fly to London to discuss the matter. He arrived in Britain last Sunday and the next day went to see the doctors, hired by Bar-clays, who had passed him fit originally. Their medical report backed the findings of the American doctors. The British doctors - Harley Street specialists - said that it would not be in the bank's interests for the American to take up the position. After a brief discussion between Sir Peter and Mr O'Neill, it was decided that he would leave. He was offered no compensation and he did not ask for any. As Sir Peter said: "All he has cost us was the price of a few plane tickets between here and America." Those who saw Mr O'Neill on Monday were shocked by his appearance. When he was appointed, he appeared to be the vision of Californian fitness, slim and tanned. On Monday, he looked extremely tired and was disappointed about the outcome of events.

Barclays convened an emergency board meeting at 7pm on Monday and yesterday issued a terse statement. At first the share price plummeted on the news but it then made a sharp recovery.

Barclays Bank without Mr O'Neill at its helm becomes much more of a takeover target. Sir Peter must now go through the whole recruitment process again.

Why stress puts strain on heart

EXPECTING a chief executive to lead an international company when he is suffering from uncontrolled atrial fibrillation, an irregularly beating heart, is like expecting Damon Hill to win a grand prix with a car in which the timing has slipped and is backfiring. Barclays Bank must have hoped that after his pre-employment medi-cals, Mike O'Neill would firing on all cylinders.

A pre-employment medical examination is a skilled task. requiring much experience and a wide-ranging knowl-edge of medicine. In many countries, such examinations include invasive investigations ranging from thallium scans for the heart to colonoscopies for the bowels.

in atrial fibrillation, the heart rhythm is irregularly irregular. This favours the production of small clots, which can cause a stroke. The tasks that one can undertake after developing atrial fibrillation depend on the underlying cause, and the degree of control that a doctor is able to achieve. A heart can be irretrievably damaged by an infection or other cause in which case it would be unwise to con-timue with a stressful job. There are four chambers of the heart, which need to beat in the correct order. The two atria fill with blood, which periodically flows into the two ventricles. These pump the blood either into the lungs or around the body. An irregular action makes itself felt as palpitations, and the inefficiency brought on by the arrhythmia may make the patient breathless, faint and, if it is persist-ent, abnormally tired.

MEDICAL BRIEFING

With atrial fibrillation, the atria may beat up to 600 times per minute, and the ventricles will respond with up to 180 beats. Medication can slow the ventricular rhythm to 70 beats, making the palpitations no longer obvious.

Atrial fibrillation may be part of the ageing process or the result of underlying disease. If the cause is an overactive thyroid gland, it is easily corrected. If it is coronary heart disease or high blood pressure, a defibrillator is used to restore the rhythm. The fibrillation may be symptomatic of heart failure from other causes, which may be treated with betablockers, ACE inhibitors and diuretics. Rheumatic heart disease, damage to the heart valves or excessive intake of alcohol can also cause the condition.

BANKER'S HEART BELONGS TO SAN FRANCISCO

By Russell Jenkins NORTH WEST CORRESPONDENT

AN AIRBAG may have caused a woman's death in a head-on crash, an inquest was told yesterday. Jennifer Reichardt was said to have suffered a rare skull fracture when the inflating bag knocked her backwards into her seat's headrest with the force of falling off a building.

Her family is now calling for car manufacturers to place warnings on the steering wheels of cars with airbags, advising a minimum distance to sit from the wheel. The other car in the collision walked away with a cut lip. had no airbag, and the driver

The inquest at St Heleus. Merseyside, is the first in Britain to consider whether the force of an airbag inflating contributed to a death during an accident. The case is being followed closely by manufacturers after concern abroad. especially in America where airbags have been blamed for a number of deaths, mostly of children. Ms Reichardt, 47, a legal secretary, from Rainhill, St helens, was driving her Rover 400 at an estimated 19mph in January last year when she was in collision with a 13-year-old Opel driven at approximately 27 mph. Dr Kenat Whistoa Hospital, said her head injuries were unlike anything he had seen in 17 years of emergency medicine: This is the first case I have seen where I suspected it might be an airbag. I considered the possibility that the injury was caused by being thrown back by an airbag against the head

Ernest Gradwell, a pathologist, said that Ms Reichardt had died from head injuries of a kind he had never seen before from a traffic accident. She suffered a "very uncommon" fracture which formed a ring at the base of the skull. There appeared to be no contact with the windscreen or steering wheel.

Dr Gradwell said: "Miss Reichardt received a force to the front of her skull from which she could not have survived. It would be a similar force to someone jumping from the top of a building."

PC Harry Walsh, senior vehicle examiner with Merseyside Police, thought that the injuries were caused by the airbag rather than the car's bulkhead. He agreed with counsel that manufacturers should do more to warn mo-torists of potential dangers. James Byrne, counsel for the family, had suggested a simple warning on steering wheels, advising a minimum distance to sit from the wheel.

Mr Byrne said: "The evi-dence is that an airbag which is supposed to be a safety feature has essentially shattered the skull of the driver. If it is possible for a man driving a 13-year-old car to walk away from a head-on collision without an airbag in his car, it looks like Jennifer Reichardt could have hobbled away in a plaster had she not had an airbag in her car." Airbags in-flate at 140 to 200mph in one hundredth of a second. Mr Byrne said, and in the motor industry their inflators are treated as explosive devices. Paul Leyland, 22, the other driver involved in the collision. said that his car had failed to negotiate a bend. His only injury was a cut lip. Mr Ley-land was fined £250 for driving without due care and attention. The inquest, with a jury, is expected to end today.

No relief for the dying in Belgrade hospital

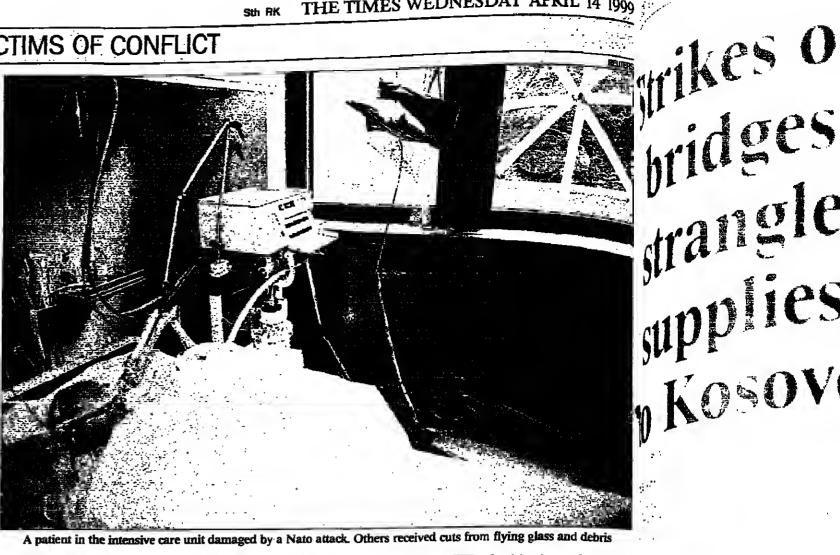

Bombing by Nato jets is inflicting more suffering on injured civilians, writes Tom Walker in Belgrade

THE doctor turned away from the row of beds and looked at us with a physician's knowing eyes. Ivan, 14, said Dr Nenad Markovic, would probably die. In the background, heart monitors intermittently beeped and ventilators and respirators helping to keep the seri-ously injured alive hummed.

It was probably best that we did not meet Ivan's parents. Half of us were from Nato morning bombed the hospital where their only son is fighting for his life. A week ago the same harbingers of Western justice had bombed Ivan's hometown, Pristina, inflicting the gaping stomach wound that began this cruel chapter in a young life.

One of Dr Markovic's fellow consultants, Dr Radoslav Svicevic, stood at the foot of the bed and tried to reassure us that there was still hope. Ivan, do you like Partisan? he asked. Ivan shook his head. "What about Red Star?" Despite the tubes and drips, a smile creased his face at the Alliance fears a spy in its ranks

FROM BEN MACINTYRE IN WASHINGTON

AMERICAN and Nato officials fear that a spy within the alliance may be tipping off Bel-grade about when and where to expect airstrikes.

On at least three occasions Serb authorities have cleared people from target sites shortly before they were struck, raising suspicions that President Milosevic is receiving advance warning of some Nato attack plans, according to US news reports citing officials in Washington and Brussels.

General Wesley Clark, the Nato Supreme Allied Commander, did not rule out the possibility of espionage at a news briefing yesterday but he said that steps were being taken to stop secret military plans falling into Serb hands. "Nato remains very vigilant in terms of protecting the security of its operations, and we are taking all appropriate measures in that regard," he said. Last week a Serb military barracks was evacuated when an urgent radio message was received ordering everyone out of the building "minutes" before the target was hit by Nato bombs, the officials told ABC television news.

Similarly, although Nato had given a warning that it might strike official buildings in the centre of Belgrade, the Serbian Interior Ministry was reportedly "buzzing with activity" on the night of April I. The following night it was completely deserted when it was struck. While the building was strill huming Serb police at the still burning Serb police at the scene told local reporters the ministry had been "evacuated on time".

US officials are also said to be concerned that Serb police "suddenly" sealed off a bridge to traffic immediately before a Nato airstrike.

Any leakage of bombing plans would leave Nato planes vulnerable to the Serbian air defence system since an "am-bush" could be laid for the at-tacking planes. Nato officials are said to have tightened security surrounding operational plans while a hunt begins for the nameless suspected spy, whose nationality is also unknown.
Only the most senior military planners in Nato would have access to the top secret bombing plans. "If there is such a spy, we are talking about a top-level individual," an official in Washington said.

But the resolution emphasised that the troops be used only in "logistical, bumanitarian and bealth support roles", and ruled out "any military ground intervention" in Yugoslavia. The resolution faced a stormier passage in the Lower House. where Signor D'Alema's majority largely depends on Communist MPs vehemently opposed to the Nato air raids.

Strikes on bridges strangle supplies to Kosovo

THREE weeks ago General Wesley Clark, Nato's Supreme Allied Commander, memora-bly warned Belgrade that the aim of Operation Allied Force was to "systematically and progressively attack, disrupt, degrade, devastate and ultimately destroy those [Yugo-slav] forces and their facilities and support".

Nearly 6,000 sorties and 1,700 bombing raids later, the Nato air campaign has succeeded, despite the poor weather, in inflicting a huge amount of damage to about 200 fixed sites, but the minimum of damage to mobile targets - Yugo-slav Army, police and paramilitary units in Kosovo.

The attacks on Yugoslav troops in Kosovo began in the first week of Operation Allied Force at a time when the main focus was on destroying or disrupting the integrated air defence system. But each day, as the air campaign progressed at a steady rate. Nato officials had to admit that elements of the Yugoslav Army and Ministry of Interior police were still operating effectively against the Kosovo Liberation Army. While this was unfortunate for General Clark whose statement of intent on March 25 may have given the impression that the Kosovo troops' days were numbered, the American commander knew ihat the only realistic way to affect the operations of the least during the initial stages of the campaign - was to attack other targets, many of them hundreds of miles away.

The town of Novi Sad, well to the north of Belgrade, has been hit almost as many times as Pristina, the capital of Kosovo. This is because it is the location of Yugoslav Army barracks, an oil refinery, strategic roads and bridges, all of which have a direct link to the operations in Kosovo. The oil refinery has been hit several times, reducing, if not eliminating, its capability to turn crude oil into fuel for the tanks and armoured vehicles in Kosovo.

Similarly, the oil refinery at Pancevo near Belgrade has also taken many direct hits. The military would argue that the refineries' value for President Milosevic lay in their ability to support his war machine. Roads and bridges are, in military parlance, "lines of communication", and oil refineries are the lifeblood of an army in action.

General Clark's strategy, following well-practised rules. has been to try to strangle the arteries leading to Kosovo, cutting off supplies and supply routes to isolate the 40,000 Yugoslav Army and paramilitary

In three weeks, according to General Clark's damage assessment yesterday, Nato cruise missiles have managed to destroy 70 per cent of Yugoslavia's oil, petrol and lubri-cant stocks. The oil refineries at Novi Sad and Pancevo are probably beyond repair.

In other moves to create a sense of isolation for the Yugoslav forces in Kosovo, Nato has succeeded in doing sufficient damage to the country's air defence system to force the troops to take cover because they know they can no longer rely on the Yugoslav Air Force or surface-to-air missile batter-fence Staff, said yesterday that more than 50 surface-to-air missile sites had been attacked, the majority of them ies to protect them.

MiG29s have also been destroyed, either in the air or on the ground. Although General Guthrie and other commanders have been reporting each day that they have intelligence of rapidly deteriorating morale among

the Yugoslav Air Force's 16

the forces in Kosovo, the physical evidence is less reassuring.

Only occasionally has Nato been able to present evidence that the stranglehold strategy has produced results on the ground.

For example, it was claimed that, arone stage, fuel shortages had immobilised the 549th Motorised Brigade, a Kosovo battle group, and that it had had to wait for fuel to arrive before it could move out of harm's way.

Although one of the reasons for the Yugoslav Army's present strategy of hiding from Nato bombers may be to preserve its dwindling fuel stocks, the unexpected incursion over the Kosovo border into Albania yesterday indicated that Mr Milosevic's forces are not yet so weakened that they are ready to give up military operations. Strangling the forces in Kosovo is not General Clark's only strategy, although it is the one which ultimately will decide whether Nato's air campaign has been a success or failure. The wider strategy is to cause long-term damage to Mr Milosevie's military infrastructure.

The choice of targets bears this

Although Nato is not providing a running total of every category of target hit, it can be estimated that more than 10 air-fields, at least 20 army headquarters and facilities, 15 or so Ministry of Interior Police and security sites, and about a half a dozen factories which Nato insists had a military function. have been attacked.

Bridges will remain among the most sensitive of targets, particularly after the missile attack on the railway bridge near Leskovac on Monday which hit a passenger train.

Assuming that General Clark has many other bridges on his list of targets, the risk of civilian casualties will rise. Already up to 20 bridges have been hit. They include four in or near Novi Sad, a road and rail bridge at Kusumlija, and two others at Leskovac. Some of these were hit because they contained vital fibre optic cables, others because they were key routes for fuel lorries

Relics of Second World War hinder RAF's effectiveness

Outdated bombs frustrate Harrier pilots, writes John Phillips in Gioia del Colle

AN ANTIQUATED range of weaponry, including some equip-ment dating from the Second World War, has handicapped the fighting capacity of RAF Harrier GR7 ground attack jets during the three-week-old air conflict, military experts say.

The pilots of No. I Fighter Squadron based at Gioia del Colle in southeastern Italy this week adopted new "cloud-busting" techniques, for the first time dropping free-fall 1,000lb bombs through bad weather that previously pre-vented them from hitting Serb targets without an unacceptable risk of inflicting civilian casualties.

But the latest attacks, deemed to have been successful, are believed to have been heavily dependent on guidance from SAS units on the ground who are identifying targets for the E20 million jump jets. Such support may not be available later in the conflict and new weapons commissioned during the Gulf War to match the American air-fired cruise missiles are not expected to go into service for another two years.

The RAF has not disclosed how many bombs it has dropped successfully, but it has acknowledged that as many as 11 missions had to turn back because of cloud preventing them dropping laser-guided Paveway II bombs.

The weather cleared last week to allow them to drop cluster bombs for the first time. But the pilots' frustration is clear from the atmosphere in the Apulian bar where British pilots while away their time discussing tactics and drink-ing cocktails. Harrier pilots insist that their efforts are having an impact on the Serb military machine. inviting sceptics to consider how people at home would feel if simi-lar raids were made on Britain.

The threat to their lives from Serbian anti-aircraft gunners when they are in the air means they have no time to be bored. "When you are operating in a live theatre you never have to motivate yourself," one Harrier pilot said. "We know that the Serbs are a very capable outfit. When you see Sam missile activity, it tends to keep you on your toes."

But it is clear that the pilots would welcome the new weapons: the Storm Shadow and Brimstone missiles would match the American air-fired cruise missiles, which can be aimed in thick cloud. Storm Shadow, which is being built by British Aerospace, is a long range stand-off attack missile that will combine pinpoint accuracy with effectiveness.

Also expected to be available for Harriers within two to four years is GEC Marconi's Brimstone raissile, which will replace the BL755 cluster bomb to provide a lethal anti-armour capability while minimising the risk to attacking

The cluster bomb entered RAF service in 1972. The standard 1,000lb Paveway II general purpose bomb has been in service since 1979. Some of these bombs have Second World War casings that have been repacked and are still in service, an RAF source said. The newer 2,000ib Paveway III is also available to the Harriers and not been dropped by them yet.

The prototypes of Storm Shad-ow and Brimstone are being tested and developed at RAF Boscombe Down near Bournemouth. RAF officers say that the test programme could not be speeded up even if more money was made available by the Government. But some analysts believe extra funding could help to widen the range of the Harriers more rapidly.

The RAF argues that it would be blinkered to judge the success or otherwise of its efforts by statistics alone. As one RAF source put it: "The idea is not to make Serbia cease to exist. The idea is simply to stop the humanitarian atrocities."
RAF sources say that a mistaken public perception of warfare has. been created by films such as Star Wars in which the enemy is vaporised. In real combat where civilian casualties are unacceptable, there are different kinds of strike. "If you want to take out a tank, for example, you can take out its barrel so it can't shoot, take out its optics so it can't aim or take out its crew. You can take out its tracks or its engine to prevent it being used. You don't have to vaporise it."

However, if the introduction of new weapons is not accelerated, the RAF may see itself sidelined by the US Air Force.

The bridge and train at Leskovac, hit by "uncanny" accident

FROM CHARLES BREMNER IN BRUSSELS

NATO yesterday gave a detailed account of what it called the "uncan-ny accident" that led one of its pilots to hit a passenger train in Serbia with two guided bombs, killing ten passengers.

General Wesley Clark, the Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, said the pilot had launched his first laser-guided bomb several miles from the railway bridge over the river Morava at Leskovac on Monday. He steered it towards its target visually by remote control.

"As he stared intently at the desired aim-point on the bridge, at the very last instant he caught a flash of movement that was the train coming in. It was the last second. Unfortunately he couldn't dump the bomb at this time. He realised what had happened was that he had not hit the bridge, he had hit the train."

The pilot compounded the disaster by making a second approach to the bridge. "He aimed at the other end of the bridge... unfortunately at the last minute he realised the train had slid forward... by striking the other end of the bridge he actually caught the train."

The pilot and Nato regretted the loss of life, said General Clark. Belgrade has accused the allies of deliberately targeting the train.

BALKANS WAR: THE REFUGEES

Serb soldiers using rape as tactic of war

BRITAIN yesterday accused Serb forces of systematically raping ethnic Albanian women as the first victims recounted horrific ordeals.

Robin Cook, the Foreign Secretary, said that Serb security forces were using a barracks near the Albanian border for the repeated abduction and rape of Kosovan Albanian women and girls. Human rights officials said that the pracoce — a war crime — was being used to terrorise and destroy the community. We are now getting a pat-tern of repeated reports that young women were separated from the refugee columns and forced to endure systematic rape in an army camp at Djakovica, near the Albanian border," Mr Cook said. The reports, from refugees fleeing into Albania, have taken time to emerge because of the women's reluctance to tell of their experiences, "It is a source of shame in their society as well as great shame on those who carry out such appalling crimes," he said, adding that the number of indeElizabeth Judge pendent accounts gave the tales "a ring of corroboration". Several victims gave harrow-ing accounts of their ordeals yesterday. Many remained nameless, fearful of the stigma attached to rape in a mainly Muslim society.

One victim, "Drita", described how she and seven other women were separated from their families. Wringing her hands and speaking in fal-tering tones, she told a BBC reporter that they were gangraped by Serbian soldiers and that four of the women were later killed. One was seven months pregnant.

She said: They started to shoot everywhere and then they told us to leave the house.

Four of them were with masks. One was from my village, he started to hit me and the others. The captain told my father, your daughter is good for wife, for Serbian wife. One of them had sex with me. the other hit me, the others

In a voice racked with disbelief, she continued: "At that moment I thought God doesn't exist. I thought they wanted to kill me, but no. They didn't want to kill me. I wanted to kill myself. Nobody knows what really happened to me." She added: "My friends think I am crazy when I scream at night."

An older woman from the same north Kosovo village alleged that soldiers separated women from their families and then raped ten by the roadside. "They said to the girls: 'You are beautiful, You are for me. We are not going to shoot you, but we want your families to see what we are doing." They threw the girls to the ground, and then with their knives, they tore every part of

BALKANS WAR: ALLIED RESOLVE

Milosevic will pay in full for atrocities'

PRESIDENT Milosevic and his generals were warned by Tony Blair yesterday that they will be held responsible for any harm that comes to the half million Kosovan Albanians who have been driven from their homes but remain within the province.

In a Commons statement, the Prime Minister said that Nato's military action had a moral purpose as much as a strategic interest. The barbarity perpetrated on civilians in Kosovo, simply on the ground of their ethnic identity. could not be be allowed to succeed.

In a clear warning to Serbian military commanders that they could be tried for war crimes, Mr Blair said that Mr Milosevic's forces were continuing their "ethnic cleansing" but at a reduced level. 'As a result of Nato action to date. the pace has significantly dimin-ished," he said. "His tanks have to conceal themselves from Nato aircraft. His fuel supplies are running low. Many have sought refuge in the hills and forests of Kosovo. We are looking at all the opiions to assist them.

doing that," Mr Blair said that the extra 1,800 troops were being sent so Brit-ain "could be in a position to play our proper role in the effort to ensure the refugees are able to return to Kosovo in safety".

Mr Blair, reporting to a sombre House on military developments during the Easter recess, told MPs that the allied action would take time to succeed, but there could be no compromise in the battle to defeat "ethnic cleansing".

William Hague said that the Opposition continued to back the Nato campaign. He said that Mr Blair had rightly described Mr Milosevic as a dictator and spoken of the need for war crimes investigations, adding: "How does he view the likelihood of us now being able to negotiate a political settlement with Milosevic?"

Mr Blair said it was not a question of negotiating, "It is a question of him meeting the terms Nato has set out. And there will be no compromise on those terms. They will be secured in full."

Paddy Ashdown, the Liberal Democrat leader, said he had yet to see evidence that Milosevic had been forced to do something he did not intend to do. "We have not yet forced him to take action.

These operations," he added, still have a long way to go. There will be setbacks, including casualties, among them no doubt unintended civilian casualties."

Martin Bell, the former BBC war correspondent and Independent MP for Tatton, said: "It is clear that we are in the presence of the greatest war crimes in Europe for more than half a century. Yet we continue to respond with air power and air power alone."

He challenged Mr Blair: "Is it not true that circumstances on the ground can only be changed by boots on the ground?"

Mr Blair replied: "I simply ask people who say that we should put in ground forces now to just reflect on what an undertaking that is."

Madeleine Albright meets reporters after her Oslo talks yesterday

Moscow insists air war must end

After four hours of talks in Oslo. Mr Ivanov and Madeleine Albright, the US Secretary of State, said they had "narrowed differences" in their approach to President Milosevic. The session produced no breakthrough in the allies' push to bring Russian pressure to bear on Mr Milosevic, but there was none of the acrimony of recent statements from President Yeltsin about the danger of a new world war. The main sticking point was over a Nato force in Kosovo to protect the population. Mr Ivanov noted that Belgrade was refusing to consider the entry of any foreign troops without its assent. Moscow eventually could accept a UN presence in the province, he said, and, with an eye to the Serbians, he added: "We are against any form of violence, irrespective of who is committing it.

MPs dig in for long and bloody battle agreed, but the means remain cloudy. Backing at Westminster for the Nato military action in Kosovo has increased since before Easter. Reports about Serb atrocities and the plight of the refugees have solidified support for the bombing campaign and for the Nato aim of securing the "unconditional and safe return of all refugees" protected by a Nato-led international force.

But doubts remain about how these objectives can be achieved, echoing similar concerns heard in Washington as Congress returned from a twoweek recess.

ington, legislators talk of shock among constituents about the harrowing pictures from Kosovo. But this is linked to uncertainty. After Congresional leaders met President Clinton, The Los Angeles Times reported "there is still no consensus in either party on such key issues as how long the air campaign should last, when ground forces should be sent and how much money Congress is willing to spend. The mood in the Commons was subdued as MPs heard the first report from Tony Blair on Kosovo for nearly a fortnight. There was a general acceptance both of the necessity of the action and its probable length. Its opponents were still there - Tony Benn. Tam Dalyell. Alice Mahon and, at his most contrary, Alan Clark. But they are clearly a minority. Even the hard-left Campaign Group is split, more so than during the Gulf War. n the Tory side, Mr Clark apart, the pre-Easter critics and apparently more reluctant to rock the boat. William Hague was cautious, expressing general support and ask-ing a series of probing questions on the aims, the Kosovan Albanian refugees and the role of ground troops, as a Leader of the Opposition should.

MPs reflected the public mood, since repeated polls have shown rising support for the air campaign.

If there is now more clarity about overall aims, and greater agreement about them, few MPs appear sure about how we get from here to there. Even if "ethnic cleansing" has not been stopped, the air campaign is clearly now damag-ing Serbian military capacity.

The aims are clearer, but few seem sure of how we get there?

To portray the issue as being for or against ground troops is gross oversimplification. The choice is more subtle. A land force invasion is still ruled out, even though many

MPs regard that as inevitable — and the commitment of ground troops now has grow-ing support in polls in Britain, the United States, Germany and France.

Mr Blair was insistent that dertaking, in the face of organised Serb resistance, are formidable". Not only would the potential loss of life be "considerable" but "assembling such a force would take weeks".

Nato has talked of using ground troops only in a "permissive environment". But Mr Blair made clear that this does not mean reaching an agreement with Belgrade before troops can be deployed.

As Paddy Ashdown said.

there is a crucial distinction between using ground troops when the risks are permissible, which would be reasonable, and when President Milosevic permits them, which would not be acceptable. Mr Blair stressed that Mr Milosevic has no veto.

o with a further LS00 British troops being sent to Greece and US expanding its forces, the option is being created of an intervention on the ground to protect the return of the refugees. This would be when Serb military capabilities in Kosovo have been reduced even fur-

The Woodhead 'conspiracy'

THE former wife of Chris Woodhead yesterday emerged from the shadows of a leftwing campaign to destabilise him and challenged the Prime Minister to dismiss him as Chief Inspector of Schools.

Behind Mrs Woodhead's carefully timed media offensive is a trio of experienced political activists. One of them, Kate Illingworth, who is a retired teacher and cousin of the veteran left-wing journalist Paul Foot, admitted yesterday that she was motivated by a political desire to topple Mr Woodhead.

"I have got an agenda against Chris Woodhead. He has humiliated the teaching profession. This is a good enough stick to use. It is a convenient stick," Ms Illingworth told The Times.

Few supporters of the Chief Inspector of Schools believe it was a coincidence that Mrs Woodhead made her debut on the airwaves as the House of Lords prepared to debate making it a criminal teaching friends, Ofsted chief at the Bristol school where he was teaching when his alleged affair took place, had made most of the running. They appear to have been motivated by a mixture of personal animosity towards Mr Woodhead, dating back to the staffroom, a desire for "the truth" to come out, and political dogma.

For 25 years Mrs Woodhead maintained a vow of silence about her husband's infidelity. Even when the News of the World revealed the first sketchy details of the affair three years ago she stayed silent for the sake of their daughter, according to an interview she gave in last month's Mail on Sunday.

She has now gone public at a time when her ex-husband — the scourge of the teaching unions because of his illdisguised contempt for the mediocre among the profession - is down and nearly out Mr Woodhead, who was appointed by the Conservatives and kept on by new Labour, is fighting for survival.

Mrs Woodhead's foes portray her as a vengeful former wife desperate to destroy her former husband's career. Her supporters maintain she is a dignified woman whose patience has snapped after a quarter of a century of hurt.

The turning point for Mrs Woodhead was his widely re-ported remarks that it could be "educative and experiential" for teachers to conduct affairs with pupils. The comment reignited interest in his relationship with a former pupil, Amanda Johnston, The final straw was Mr Wood-

Mr Woodhead was Ms IIIingworth's head of English at Gordano School in 1974. She is one of five former teachers who have claimed that the affair with Ms Johnston had been an open secret there.

Ms Illingworth is a longtime Labour activist whose uncle is the former Labour leader Michael Foot and whose political heroes include Tony Benn; the former Cabinet minister represented a Bristol constituency before he was elected for Chesterfield. But Ms Illingworth has allowed her party membership

NEWS IN BRIEF

Girl's naked body found in alleyway

The naked body of a girl aged about 17 has been found at Guildford. Surrey. Detectives began a murder investigation after a man oo his way to work saw the body lying in an alley leading to lock-up garages opposite the Civic Hall. The only obvious signs of injury were grazes to the victim's face. Police scaled off the area as forensic scientists and officers with dogs searched for clues. As door-to-door inquiries began, police started to examine hours of security camera videotapes. The body was found a few hundred yards from the town centre's nightclubs and restaurants. Detectives appealed for anyone who was out on Monday night and may have seen anything

Dog-fight man jailed

John "Rustler" Parker, a leading figure behind organised dog fights in Britain, became the first person to be found guilty of involvement without being caught at the scene of a fight. Parker, 34, was jailed for four months and banned from keeping dogs for 10 years after being convicted of causing unnecessary sufferiog on the RSPCA's evidence of equipment and wounded dogs found at his home in Kexby, Lincolnshire.

Rural cash machines

Cash dispensers linked to banks via satellite are to be installed in suburbs and rural districts. By the end of the year customers of all high street banks will be able to use more thao 350 machines at Co-op stores, saving journeys and increasing trade for out-of-town shops. When a card is inserted, information is sent from a dish on the store roof via satellite to the customer's bank in a 100,000-mile round-trip that takes only seconds.

CS victim wins £7,000

A man has woo £7,000 in damages for being assaulted by police with a CS spray. Kevin Missen, 21, was sprayed in the face in Liverpool in December 1996 as he looked into a police van to see his brother, who had been arrested for urinating in public. A charge of being drunk and disorderly orderly against Mr Missen was dismissed by magistrates and be fater sued Merseyside Police.Mr Missen said: "My eyes were not right for two weeks."

Burglar's calling card

A burglar was arrested for a string of thefts after he dropped his prisoo discharge papers at the first hreak-in. Richard Brown, 25, had been released from the prison ship HMP Weare in Portland, Dorset, but was quickly picked up after police found the papers, which included his photograph, name, age, description and previous convictions. Brown was jailed again for 21 months by Dorchester Crown Court.

ple in the way that would be natural in the private sector. This means that the Government might be forced to look farther afield for a successor. Lord Haskins; for example, who runs Northern Foods, would bring a strong managerial pedigree. John McIntosh, head of the private sector Centre for British Teachers, would maintain a critical approach. He also has experience of running a large national organisation, Shelter. Less prominent candidates from the business world might include Pat Lee, head of retail training at Tesco and a member of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority.

Mike Tomlinson, Mr Wood-head's deputy and the head of inspections, would be the natural caretaker in the event of a surprise resignation. But the 56-year-old chemist would not be a charismatic leader in the Woodhead mould.

Mr Tomlinson came to public attention as the leader of the emergency inspection of The Ridings School, in Halifax. But he blotted his copybook as a spokesman for the agency when, in an unguard-ed moment, he said he "did not give a monkey's toss" about teachers' views.

A more probable candidate would be Anthea Millett, who heads the Teacher Training Agency and was Mr Tomlinson's predecessor at Ofsted. But, like many of the other possible candidates from within the education world, she could be seen as more sympathetic to teachers than Mr Woodhead and therefore likely to weaken the Government's "zero tolerance" approach in schools. Susan Lewis, Chief Inspector of Schools in Wales, has shed her normally low profile in recent evidence to the Select Committee on Education. She would be at home running the similar English system. In the past, the Post Office has been the main supplier of appointees to senior educational posts. John Roberts, the present chief executive, would appear to have more than enough on his plate, but who

Blood and tears regime earns admiration

BY JOHN O'LEARY

IF CHRIS WOODHEAD had to relinquish his post, his legacy would be a wealth of information on schools that would be the envy of other countries. But he would remain best known for his battle against the education establishment. Since his appointment to head the Office for Standards in Education, he has waged a relentless campaign against sloppy teaching and bureaucratic incompetence.

He has sailed close to the political wind but, under two Governments, has always been able to rely on support in Downing Street. Many observers believe, however, that his standing has been so damaged by the continuing allegations of his former wife and past teaching colleagues that he will be unable to remain in the joh for long.

After four years as Chief Inspector, Mr Woodhead has driven through a programme of inspections that has won support from parents and even gradging acceptance from many teachers, but his talent as a communicator has ensured he and his organisation remain controversial.

Malcolm Wicks, who chairs the Commons Select Committee on Education and Employment, said recently that there were two Ofsteds: one in which inspectors went quietly about their jobs and another "about blood and thunder and guts and tears".

This is the Ofsted likely to disappear without Mr Woodhead. Although that would be a relief to those in schools, it might oot be welcome to a Government as anxious as its predecessor to maintain pressure on teachers for improved results.

last night to find new buyers for the Govan shipyard and other operations after the engineering giant Kvaerner announced a shake-up threatening 5.000 jobs.

The Norwegian firm put its Govan yard in Glasgow and engineering and construction operations in the North East and Sheffield up for sale. Lord Macdonald of Tradeston, the Scottish Business and Industry Minister, who used to work at Govan, hopes the task force can find a new buyer for the yard before orders run out in the summer.

Stephen Byers, the Trade and Industry Secretary, met John Fletcher, a Kvaerner director, last night to discuss what the Government could do to help with the sale of the English operations. These are key manufacturing facilities which we need to secure for the future so that jobs can be protected," he said.

The sell-off is part of a worldwide review by the company after a period of severe losses. It will shed 25,000 staff worldwide. The firm announced it is to pull out of shipbuilding operations, putting yards employ-ing nearly 2,000 people at Gov-

an and Clydebank up for sale. The task force, to be headed by Sir Gavin Laird, the former union leader, will seek an early meeting with the Ministry of Defence, which is expected to place a huge order for new roll-on, roll-off vessels later

If Govan does close later this year, it will be the latest victim in the dramatic decline of the British shipbuilding industry, which used to employ more than 200,000 workers in hundreds of yards in the 1920s but is now down to around 30,000 at less than 20 main centres. Lord Macdonald said he believed the yard had "considerable poteotial". He added: "It is now a modern, pro-ducove shipyard capable of building ships to the highest technical specification."

Labour appealed to the Scottish nationalists not to turn the closure into an election issue. But the SNP insisted that Donald Dewar, the Scottish Secretary, must accept some blame. Nicola Sturgeon, the SNP Govan candidate who plans to meet shop stewards today, said: Tony Blair's failure to visit Kvaerner during his recent visit to Glasgow gave the unfortunate impression that the Government was not giving top priority to the yard's

1,500 workers in North East fear for future

BY PAUL WILKINSON NORTH EAST CORRESPONDENT

THOUSANDS of workers in the North of England were also contem-plating a bleak future after Kvaerner's announcement of plans to sell its British subsidiaries.

There are serious doubts over the long-term future of 900 workers at the Port Clarence offshore yard in Middlesbrough and 600 at Cleveland

Bridge in Darlington, which helped to build the Severn and Humber bridges. Both of these Kvaerner sites are struggling to fill their order books. Its two Davy Roll steel fabrication plants in Gateshead on Tyneside and Sheffield in South Yorkshire, which employ almost 1.000 workers, have also been put on the market but managers there are confident they can be sold as a going coocern. Kvaerner's other interests on Tees-

side, its Process and Metals division at Stockton and Redpath Engineering Services at Wilton, which together have 1,500 staff, are not affected. At Port Clarence, which last year started building the Triton North Sea oil and gas platform, a spokesman said the plant needs new orders urgently". He said: "It is likely one of the yards will have to be downscaled. Work on the Triton platform is guaranteeing jobs until the summer, but beyond that the future is uncertain. Frank Cook, Labour MP for Stockton North, is angry that Kvaerner is voicing no concern for the Port Clarence workers. He said: "Its explanation so far is couched io banker's speak, and nothing about how it will hit individuals." One 25-year-old worker at the yard said: "Everyone is worried about the future. SNP to concede £2bn hole in budget

By JASON ALLARDYCE SCOTTISH POLITICAL REPORTER

THE Scottish nationalists are to admit for the first time that an independent Scotland would have to live with a £2 billion hole in its budget.
The admission, to be made in an economic strategy paper to be published before the Scottish election on May 6, wil reignite the debate over whether Scotland could afford to stand alone without being subsidised by English taxpayers.

The SNP is expected to claim that the shortfall between what is raised and what is spent in Scotland will be just under £2 billion in 2000-01 before moving into surplus.

Labour has used government figures to claim that an independent Scotland would run up a cumulative deficit of more than £15 billion over the next four years. But the SNP will argue that in relative terms, the Scottish deficit is smaller than the overall deficit for the United Kingdom. The total UK deficit stood at £32 billion according to the latest government figures for 1996-97 and the SNP will point out that Westminster has not needed to increase taxation sharply to tackle this. The Scottish deficit was officially put at E7 billion in 1996-97, with total government expenditure of E31.8 billion as against E24.7 billion raised in revenue in Scotland. When North Sea oil and privatisation proceeds were taken into account, the figure was closer to £3 billion. Public spending was 23 per cent higher per head in Scotland than in England in 1996-97.

The SNP treasury team of John Swinney and Andrew Wilson will claim that the methodology used for official deficit figures was biased. They will say that as the UK moves towards surplus, so the Scottish deficit will shrink to around £1 billion in 2001-02 before Scotland moves into a modest surplus the year after. The SNP also will argue that, under its calculation of Scotland's deficit, the country would still meet the qualification criteria for European Monetary Union.

The paper, enotited An Economic Strategy for Independence, will also point out that Professor Andrew Hughes Hallett, an adviser to the World Bank and a leading authority on the single currency. has agreed that an independent Scotland could join economic and moentary union. SNP sources say they have deliberately used worst-case scenarios to calculate the figures.

Film chiefs call time on drinks interval

YOU CAN sink a pint in the middle of a Shakespeare play but not, it seems, in the middle of Shakespeare in Love. While the Bard was happy to provide an interval for theatregoers to seek refreshments, the film industry believes that we must persevere for hours without an intermission.

So when it was discovered that the operators of a small independent cinema were pausing the projector for a halftime half at the bar, the Society of Fiilm Distributors threatened to ban all further screenings unless the drinks break picture. The cinema is run on a lease from Barnsley Council by a management committee from the town council. Maureen Harrison, the Mayor of Penistone, who runs the committee, said: "The people of the town are really angry about this. We will take it all the way to Europe if need be."

The town council is writing to the Society of Film Distributors in London asking it to relent. The society warned the Metro that the unauthorised intervals had to stop after it sent an undercover agent on a visit. At a screening of Godzilla the spy saw drinks served during a 22-minute break.

This week the cinema has been running Shakespeare in Love - without an interval. Mrs Harrison said: "Since we have been forced to show films all the way through audience numbers have declined. The public are complaining.

"At home they can watch a film on video and have as many breaks as they want. watching half one evening and the remainder the next if they wish. What's the difference with our cinema? The television stations have breaks to show adverts during programmes, so why can't we have a break?

"It's like an old-fashioned theatre, warm and cosy, and the staff know all the customers. The ushers will even keep an eye on children for their parents and watch over them until they are collected. All this is under threat unless we can have the interval restored. The profits we make from drinks. ice-cream and popcorn help to subsidise the building.

'This is a small cinema struggling to keep open, and the money we make keeps the building watertight. This could close us down. The public are complaining with their feet. We serve isolated rural communities and there is no other entertainment for them apart from pubs.

There is no public transport to multiplex cinemas in nearby cities and the film distributors could be denying this part of the world the opportunity to see films."

David Hunt, chief executive of the Society of Film Distribvutors, said: "When our members acquire the rights of a film they take on a contractual requirement to show the film in its entirety. Cinemas sign a. licence agreement with our members to show the film without an interval. If we catch anyone breaking the terms of this agreement we ask them to stop. "It is all about the cinema experience. These are feature films which are meant to be seen straight through without arbitrary breaks. It is about 200 or 300 people watching a film together. It is totally different to watching television.

"We have asked the Penistone cinema to observe the terms of its licence that it cannot have an interval during the feature film.

"Even in the old days they had a B-film first followed by the main feature. They didn't stop the feature film halfway

A BREAK WITH CINEMA TRADITION

THE battle between art and ice-creams has raged in the cinema since the dooble projector was pioneered 87 years agoate.

That breakthrough meant that the interval could have been consigned to the cinematic dustbin. Unlike the B-movie and newsreel, however, break has survived.

Although directors and distributors are almost united in their dislike of the interval - the former for dramatie reasons, the latter for financial - the screening of epic films lasting up to three hours demands a break.

The most recent to be sbown with an approved interval was Dunces With Wolves, released in 1990 and starring Kevin Costner, which ran for 180 minutes. Others included The Godfather (175 minutes), and The Guns of Navarone (157 minutes), in which the director created a moment of high tension just before the halfway cut.

Schindler's List (195 minotes) was shown without an interval. "How can you interrupt such a powerful film just to sell ice-creams?" said Sir Sydney Samuelson. 73, the first British film commissioner. who yesterday coodemned the Yorkshire cinema for attempting to insert its own break. "I think it is appalling to interrupt the story where the director did not intend it. I feel very strongly that cinemas have a responsibility to show the film as it was intended."

Most films run for about two hours allowing cinemas to squeeze in up to four performances a day.

The force agreed to pay £5,170 compensation and £25,000 costs before Mr Ellison's case for assault, false imprisonment and malicious prosecution was heard at Manchester County Court.

Mr Ellison was angry that the police refused to offer an apology with the damages. "I did not bring this case for the money but to make a stand against this type of police misbehaviour," he said. "Some police just think that because you are black and from the inner city, you must be bad."

He complained that in October 1992 he was ambushed by police officers and bundled into a van where he was kicked in the groin and banered over the head. When he asked what was going on, he said, one officer told him: "You are going to die, you black bastard." Mr Ellison said: "It was like something out of a film about the Deep South. One policeman then took me by the GREATER Manchester Police throat and put his other hand over my face. I was gasping for air. Another officer was saying.

'Don't let the coon breathe."

Mr Ellison made a formal complaint. Six months later, he said, the same officers went to his home and taunted him with the words "nigger, come out, nigger". He said that one hit him on the shoulder with his radio and he lashed back. He was taken to a police sta-oon in a van, where he claimed that officers kneed him in the groin and kicked his stomach. He was later acquitted of assault.

The force said yesterday that the Police Complaints Authority had not upheld Mr Ellison's allegations after an internal investigation in 1993.

Italian blunder fanned Mont Blanc inferno

FROM SUSAN BELL IN PARIS

A DECISION by Italian officials to open a ventilation shaft when a fire broke out last month in the Mont Blanc tunnel linking France and Italy may have fanned the inferno in which at least 41 people died, a preliminary report said However, the report by French experts on the disaster. the worst ever road-turnel blaze, said the decision to set the ventilator on maximum.

blowing air on to the flames. was not the only explanation for the tragedy. There has been widespread outrage and speculation as to how a fire that broke out on a Belgian-registered lorry carrying margarine and flour through the seven-mile tunnel

could have caused an inferno that engulfed 35 vehicles and claimed so many lives. The fact that fresh air was introduced into the zone where the fire was developing, instead of extracting the smoke. is undoubtedly an important element that needs to be taken into account in analysing the swift flare-up of the blaze," the report said. Only two safety drills had been carried out in the tunnel since it was opened in 1965, the last one ten years ago, the report disclosed. It blamed the Mont Bland Motorway and Tunnel

(ATMB) company for its unwillingness to interrupt traffic to carry out safety exercises. Insufficient co-ordination between ATMB and its Italian sister company SITMB and the lack of a parallel emergency passageway which could have offered motorists an escape route, were also blamed in the report, which was prepared by Pierre Dusse, the tunnel's inspector-general and Michel Marec, France's chief road network engineer.

The blaze raged for three days before firefighters succeeded in extinguishing it.

According to the report, ATMB switched the smoke extractors on as soon as the fire was reported, at 10.56 am on March 24. However, "for reasons which are not known". SITMB allowed the venoladon shaft to continue blowing fresh air into the tunnel, turning the system to maximum for almost 20 minutes, the report said.

It was not unoil 11.15 am that the Italians tried to disperse the smoke using an automacc extractor which failed to work.

An attempt to use a manual machine also failed.

Other serious oversights listed in the report include the fact that there was no first aid team on the Italian side, and insufficient breathing equipment for rescue workers.

The report, which was pub-lished by Jean-Claude Gayssot, the Transport Minister and Jean-Pierre Chevenement, the Interior Minister, said "at least 41" people had died, but noted that this was not a final figure. According to the prefecture of Haute-Savoie, 45 people are reported missing. Most of those who died were suffocated inside their vehicles by carbon monoxide and other toxic fumes only minutes after the fire broke out, the report said. Faulty breathing appara-tus was probably to blame for the death of a fireman and for the serious injuries suffered by another, it concluded.

The charred remains of 34 bodies were discovered inside their vehicles. Only seven people had tried to escape on foot before they too succumbed to the heat and the fumes.

M Gayssot said he expected would be "many long months" before the tunnel was

Romano Prodi addressing the assembly yesterday

ROMANO PRODI, the anointed successor to Jacques Santer as President of the European Commission, pledged yesterday to work for a more integrated Union with closer tax policies and eventually the "true harmonisation of national economic systems".

Signor Prodi proclaimed his vision of a closer European Union at his first appearance before the European Parliament which forced Mr Santer and his Commission to resign last month over charges of mismanagement and fraud.

The former Italian Prime Minister, who was nominated unanimously by EU leaders

Incoming President woos Parliament with federalist

The centrist politician earned moderate applause with his manifesto for a Europe that mixed the broad federalist aspirations of Italian leaders with Blair-style views : on the need for more economic deregulation and flexible labour markets. The EU must wards protectionism", he said.

'The single market was the theme of the Eighties. The single currency was the theme of the Nineties. We must now face the difficult task of moving towards a single economy. a single political unity."

After the EU's "abandonment of monetary sovereignty" with the launch of the single currency this year, the coordination of tax policies among member states was urgently needed, he said. In the longer term, the EU must "create true harmonisation of the national economic systems". It was also vital, he said, for Europe to open itself more to the world in trade, foreign policy and through the development of its own defence capability. "We must put at stake all our credibility, just as European businesses do. This must be a turning point in the process of integration. We must not tolerate any delay in the realisation of our project."In must drive Europe into a great age of reform and change. We must renovate and reform our policies on the outside, in the world and internally."

Edward McMillan-Scott, leader of the British Conservative group, described Signor Prodi's manifesto as vague. "Every indication is that Mr Prodi is business as usual, but if he shows a real determination to reform the Commission

he will confound his criocs." British Labour MEPs played down Signor Prodi's federalist themes, noting his emphasis on the type of reforms long urged by Britain. Among these, Signor Prodi said that economic growth alone would not be enough to absorb crippling unemployment and preserve the welfare state for the next century. What was needed was less bureaucracy and freer markets. Paying tribute to Signor Prodi, Pauline Green, the Briosh MEP who leads the dominant socialist bloc, called him "a good European" with "a proven track record of personal integrity" and achievement in leadership of a reforming gov-

Anwar jail term expected

Many Malaysians believe a jail term for the former Deputy Prime Minister, Anwar Ibrahim, is inevitable when the High Court in Kuala Lumpur rules today (David Watts writes).

Whatever verdict Judge Augustine Paul - who sits without a jury - gives, it will mark a turning point in the country's history. Mr Anwar's dismissal last September for alleged abuse of power and immorality has split society, pitting the majority of Malays against their own in a country where ethnicity is at the centre of politics.

tycoon's wife were 'a fetish' By Damian Whitworth IN WASHINGTON

MARIA MAPLES, the estranged wife of the property tycoon Donald Trump, has spent an hour in court identifying 70 shoes alleged to have fallen victim to the sexual advances of her former publicist.

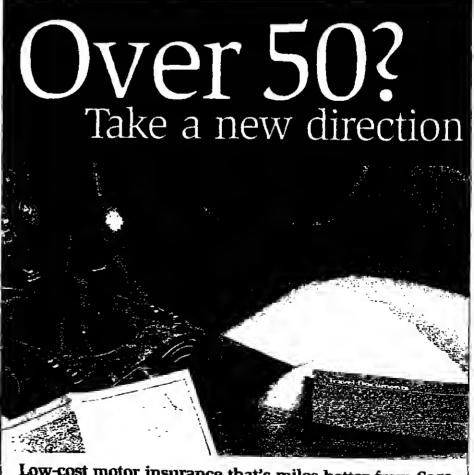

Chuck Jones, who has previously admitted being a shoe fetishist, is accused of stealing the actress's sandals, trainers, slippers, pumps and cowboy boots along with her pyjamas and tights.

The New York court was told that when Ms Maples first started to nooce that her sboes were disappearing, she became afraid to go home. When a hidden camera was installed in her flat, it recorded Mr Jones letting himself in and then kneeling in front of her cupboards. Ms Maples, 35, went with her mother and Mr Trump's security officers to Mr Jones's office and made him open a cabinet. It was full of shoes. "Piles of my shoes and boots came pouring out," Ms Maples said. "I was just so burt. They just came flooding out. They were slashed. That struck me as very aggressive and angry." .

Mr Jones, 56, who was Ms Maples's press agent before she married Mr Trump in 1993, is defending himself on charges of burglary and crimi-nal possession of stolen goods. He claims that Ms Manles sometimes used to sleep at his office to avoid the press and had left the shoes and clothing behind.

opted for loans fixed at 8 per cent for ten years. He suggests that if you have about three years left to run of a 7.5 per cent-plus fixed-rate deal, you should benefit from remortgaging, though you may have to pay redemption penalties.

These are the charges imposed by mortgage lenders on unruly borrowers who have the temerity to decamp either during the fixed or discounted period of the loan. These fines are either a percentage of the loan or up to six months' interest repayments.

However, Bardays and Nat-West have a more punitive charging policy under which the redemption charge increases as the overall level of interest rates falls. One Times reader with a £120,000 NatWest loan recently found that he would have to pay £20,000 to take his leave from the bank.

■ The remortgage loans on the market are either of the fixed or discounted variety. Those who like certainty will prefer a fixed rate, finding it reassuring to know how much they are paying out each month for a period of two to five years.

Those who like to live a little more dangerously will explore discounted variable rate offers. Here a discount of at least I per cent off the lender's standard variable rate is given. The rate payable on the loan will move in line with interest rates. Some discounted variable rates are "capped", limit-

However, leaders being anxious for your business, will often waive the ar-rangement fee and cover all the other costs

Saving grace of our children

PARENTS who squandered their pocket money at the sweet shop will be ashamed to learn that their children prefer to hang around the building society comparing rates of in-terest. The Walls Pocket Money survey this week shows that our 12 million children are saving more of their average payout of £2.40 a week. More than £28 million is paid out in pocket money each week. The youth market is big business at banks and building societies. They offer more than 60 different savings accounts for children. Some accounts provide special incentives. Many pay rates more generous than those on accounts for adults, but some institutions offer low returns. The young saver is favouring the building society sector where rates are, on average, higher. According to Moneyfacts, the savings and loan information guide, the Yorkshire Building Society is one of the best buys, paying 6.5 per cent. The Coventry Building Society also offers a good rate at 6.3 per cent. Two other socie-ties, the Bradford & Bingley and the Britannia, offer 6.25 per cent.

All banks and building societies automatically deduct 20 per cent tax from interest. Since children are not taxpayers, they can claim this tax back by completing an Inland Revenue form — R85.

The science of memetics can. Blackmore claims, explain why creative professions, which are good at spreading memes, are deemed more sexy

Now that I've seen it, it is so obviously true. Things are copied by us, and these things compete for space in our brains."

The philosopher Mary Midge-ley, based at Newcastle University, says that reducing humans to mere vehicles for the propagation of memes and genes is morally impoverished: "What upsets people is that once we realise we are a product of these two replicators, genesand memes, we are forced to drop the idea of the self, and people don't like this idea that there is no soul and no spirit."

Blackmore points out that the lack of "a self" is also a tenet of Buddhism, which she practises. Does the inclusion of her beliefs devalue her scientific argument?

"I struggle with the same ques--; tions in my science as I do in my personal life," she says. "When I practise Zen, I have to ponder ridiculous questions such as What is this moment?" But these are the same questions that science is trying to answer. I don't think science has a heart if we don't relate it to the way we live our lives."

A rift? There is no rift

New Labour, new life: Lauren Booth, half-sister to Cherie Blair, has found the family connection useful auren Booth is the poor relation whom we all expected to get nich on the back of her half-brother-inlaw, Tony Blair, and her half-sister Cherie Blair (with whom she shares a father, the actor Tony Booth). She's 31, lives in a shared rented flat on the periphery of Muswell Hill, in North London, and her most impressive possession is a maroon G-reg Escort convertible with leather bucket seats. If she has traded on the family connection - which most people would agree she has - then so far she hasn't got a very good price for it. Perhaps that could be about to change. Having subsisted for the past couple of years on a series of columns (Evening Standard, New Statesman, but not The Sun, which rebuffed her agent), she has landed a job presenting her own Channel 5 show. My Secret has a confessional format, with "ordinary people" dropping bomblets about themselves to their nearest and dearest.

She's thrilled about the whole thing. This is clear from the moment she opens the door, clutching a bowl of muesli (it's 8am) and smiling manically. She's 5ft Ilin, and looks a bit like an overgrown Jane Horrocks, with the same jagged, upturned smile. Blade-thin except at the hips, there's some thing slightly off-centre about her - in more ways than one.

he leads me into the kitchen, where she peers through a side-window to see if her flatmate's curtains are closed - "Damn, he's got the radio in there, and I want to listen to the Today programme." This is an odd thing to say when I have just arrived to interview her, but I let it go. She resumes her breakfast, telling me about her new show between mouthfuls, "It's a great slot because it's 7pm, which is a new slot for Channel 5."

"It's a fun show," she goes on. "We want lots of laughs - that's why they got me. When I do the BBC Breakfast News la newspaper review slotl, everybody says. Oh my God, I don't believe she said

This is a common reaction to Lauren Booth. Similar words have probably been uttered within No 10. Since the general election, Lauren has dropped a series of little bomblets, which have caused slight embarrassment to her famous relatives. In truth, her incendiary devices should have had greater force, but they have been deployed a little randomly.

There was the anti-hunt speech she made at the 1997 conference; the diary column in The Spectator where she referred to herself as a

Lauren Booth strongly denies that her activities have strained her links with the Blairs. Interview by Grace Bradberry

'I was

"Valkyrie-like goddess" and to Tony Blair as her "charming, Mar-mite-sandwich-making brother-in-law" who changed into "Our Leader": most recently she wrote an article for Tribune praising Ken Livingstone and suggesting the Labour leadership should drop its opposition to him running for mayor. The following day, Livingstone declared that Blair was worse than Mrs Thatcher", thus underlining her disloyalty. Did she not think she'd gone too far?

think disagreement healthy," she says defiantly. Not very new Labour, I remark. They are certainly a strong enough party to withstand someone with a point of view," she pronounces. Wasn't she at least taken aback by Livingstone's Thatcher remark? "God, it's not my business lo know what Ken Livingstone is going to say from one day to the next," she says, laugh-ing. She is clearly rather proud of the answers she is giving. The trou-ble with Lauren Booth. however, is that she is as transparent as a wet T-shirt compedition. The facts of her adult life are these: she went to drama school, became an actress, struggled to make a good living. Towards the 1997 election

she got involved in Arts for Labour, based at John Smith House. She abandoned acting altogether just before the election, went up to Sedgefield for the count, went to the party at the Royal Festival Hall, then promptly relaunched herself as a journalist after gaining a media agent at about the same time. Rarely has there been a more brazen attempt to cash in on a rela-tive's success, but Lauren spins and spins, refusing to let this stick. "It was chance, the way I look, the way I am. You know, people are going to recognise that," is how she explains the Lauren Booth post-election phenomenon.

It's a shame, because I have every sympathy with her opportunism. She hadn't had an easy life, and deserved a break. The new Labour ticket was it. Why not cash it in? If only she would acknowledge this we could all move on.

Born Sarah Booth (she adopted Lauren as a stage-name), she and ber sister Emma are the products of Tony Booth's relationship with Pamela "Suzie" Smith, a Sixties model. Their father drank.

When Lauren was 12, her mother locked the door on a drunken Booth and he accidentally set himself on fire. Lauren tried and failed to unbolt the door, hearing his shouts but unable to help. Her father was in hospital for months and it was during that period that Lauren first got to know Cherie Blair and discovered that the woman she'd met several times before was actually a

Tony Booth never came home again. Lauren and Emma were sustained by their grandmother who literally brought food parcels, and had the girls to stay at weekends. Eventually, Lauren moved in with her grandparents, before gaining a place at drama school. During that period, she was a frequent dinner guest at the Blair house-So in many ways Lauren Booth is a survivor. She spent her teenage annoyed years staying out until 5am, drinking Jack Danwe didn't iels and hanging out with other scarcely cared-for offspring of bohemian parents. The legacy of this is that an affair' Booth is an accomplished "mucker". She can make friends in bars, pick up mates at Labour conferences, work her way into the centre of things. "I'll go up to someone and say, 'So, when are you having this party? I'm coming along."

This was pretty much her approach to new Labour as the election grew closer - but it proved difficult to get in on this particular party. She worked for Arts For Labour, but as she says, "All the big people, come the general election, Millbank were in control of. They sort of shunted them away from us. You can't have any old bod like me call-ing Mick Hucknall." She's brought up that name, so I take the plunge: is it true you went out with him? "Well, not romantically, but I did go for two nights out with him. I was really, really annoyed that we didn't have an affair. I was too shy."

With scarcely a pause, she goes on to describe how she got to meet the Simply Red singer in the first place. "I saw him at the first big gala event after we won the election. I was a big fan and I went up and started singing." She spreads out her arms and dances towards the sink as she re-enacts this scene.

"Months later - I don't know whether I bumped into him, or whether I had his number from the . . . " The Labour Party's contact book, she may have been about to say. "... anyway. I rang him up and said, 'It's me. I sang in front of you at conference'." They had dinner. went to see Eddie Izzard, visited him backstage, but that was it.

Generally speaking, this appears to be Lauren Booth's modus operandi. At the Parliamentarian of the Year Awards, sponsored by The Spectator, she spotted Alan Clark across the room, and suggested they had lunch. He agreed - but didn't set a date. Did it ever happen?"It didn't." Perhaps he was too busy - or perhaps Clark saw trouble stamped on Lauren Booth's forehead.

Throughout the interview she regales me with more tales of how she went up to this person, that person, said such and such, and they were first aghast then amused, in an indulgent sort of way. She relies, you might say, on the amusement of strangers. In the corridors of LBC she bumped into Ken Living-stone, and said, "Oh my God, you are Ken Livingstone," to which he apparently replied: "I would never have had the gall to speak to someone, an elder, the way you just did." "I went, 'Oooh, you've very grand.' He went, 'You're funny'." Now they have dinner. "That's nothing political, It's just two people who like a glass of wine and can laugh."

hen did she join the Labour Party? "I don't know. Probably eight, nine years ago. don't know. Recently. Who knows." This is a very odd reply. Lauren Booth has spent much of her life on the periphery, trying to reach the centre. She tells me she likes to hear the crew talking through her earpiece when she's on set, otherwise she might feel left out. I ask about her relationship with her father, and she says: "Dad's got a new family now, he's remarried, and he's got a group of kids around him. He's a family man of the moment, and he's got that family. I don't see him a lot.'

When I ask whether her activities haven't strained relations with the Blairs she insists: "There's no rift. There's no rift." But she won't say the last time she visited No IO. This week, she's off to Labour's gala dinner - at the invitation of Tony Banks, the Minister for Sport.

 My Secret is on Channel 5, Monday, 7pm, beginning April 19.

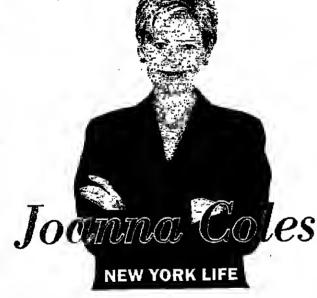

Here, the breakfast hours are aching to be filled

Friday: "Oh George Stephanopoulos is so over." groans Nadia when I try to interest her in a power breakfast where the President's former aide will be in conversarion with Walter Isaacson, the Editor of Time. Peter, of course, has scoffed at the idea of a meeting that starts at 7.30am. And in London, it's true, nothing would have persuaded me to attend a breakfast lecture. But here, the hours from 6 to 9am are viewed as time aching to be filled, and not just by joining the early-bird run around the Central Park reservoir.

The tradicion of the literary breakfast was started here by Harry Evans in his days as publisher of Random House. His 8am breakfasts, held at Barneys department store, where the literao would argue about Proust over their patisserie, were scrapped after his departure. Now the baton has been picked up by the 92nd Street Y, the famous arts and sports centre on the Upper East Side which, responding to demand, has just started its own Books and Breakfast series.

It's my first visit to this Manhattan institution and as I arrive at 7am dozens of people are filing out from the gym. their dawn workout already done. Outside the main door it's like a theatre as the crowd stands clutching tickets and waiting for friends. Breakfast with George was sold out weeks ago and a stream of disappointed young women are being turned away at the door. On the second floor the Bultenweiser lecture theatre has been transformed into a smart restaurant with 25 tables each laden with fresh flowers. goblets of freshly squeezed OJ, baskets of warm muffins, and bagels with cream cheese and smoked salmon. Seating is free-range so I plump for a central table. "Have you been to one of these breakfasts before?" I ask the fortysomething woman sitting opposite me.

"Oh yes, these definitely work for me," she says briskly. "My concentration is better at this time. Now I'm a little hungry What've we got here?"

this morning he's in mufti. "George is the most reflective and introspective person I've met in politics," Walter adds by way of introduction, and they grin their approval. Our guests then embark on the morning's discussion, kicking off with their thoughts George's on the American response to Kosovo parents which Walter suggests is "breathtakare loyally ingly ill-conceived". "Now that's annoying," says her neighbour, complaining loudly in a vigorous New York kind of way. Across the table a man and an attractive woman swap business cards with the discreet dexterity of seasoned croupiers. "Any ques-tions?" asks Walter, opening it up to the rest of us. that English civilisation was, after all, a fragile and ephemeral thing, with no ability to survive once the protecting shield of British-ness has been taken away. But I am not so pessimistic. We are living through a state of shock, and only when our political institutions have crumbled which, thanks to new Labour, will be soon - will we be able to make the great choice which history demands of us. Then we will recognise that, after all, our country is something more than its institutions, and that the good things we have squandered were created by collective effort. Then we can begin again, as all the other people of Europe have had to begin again in our century. discovering what we are, not as a collection of first-person singulars, but as a first-person plural. Suckers for punches

m l completely wrong about Kosovo? Have l missed some vital point? Those who fight wars must banish doubt from their minds, since doubt is the enemy of courage. Those who criticise them enjoy no such security. If those who oppose Nato's bombing campaign in Yugoslavia are wrong, they are a menace to the war effort. Tony Blair this week put this war on a par with the 1939 fight against Hitler. We must not again appease dictators, he says. A line has been drawn in the sand. So stop blurring that line,

Such lines are indeed important. We drew them in the Falklands and in Kuwait. The essence of collective world action is that national boundaries should not be changed by force. Wars fought to restore the sovereign integrity of nations are thus just wars. The case against Provident Milosopid has been stated. President Milosevic has been stated likewise, but with little conviction. President Clinton and Mr Blair have tried to portray Mr Milosevic as another Hitler, intent on destabilising the whole Balkans and even dominating Europe, in order to justify Nato's aggressive bombing. But they have been ridiculed by a flurry of pundits. The real casus belli in Kosovo is different - the ruthlessness with which Mr Milosevic has treated his own separatists. The case, in essence, is that the man is a monster and "must be stopped". So what is wrong with that? For evil to triumph, it is necessary only for good men to do nothing. Hamlet summoned us to "find quarrel in a straw when honour's at the stake". and warned us against "some craven scruple of thinking too precisely on the event". Is Nato's honour not at stake in Kosovo?

Nato's leaders are certainly making it so. But whereas honour's stake was clear in the Falklands and Kuwait, in Kosovo it is wobbly. Every continent is awash in Kosovotype conflicts. In former Yugoslavia, Britain recognised Croatia and Bosnia as states, despite knowing that the outcome would be ethnic cleansing. President Tudjman of Croatia, supported by the Americans, did to his Serb population in 1994-95 exactly what Mr Milosevic is doing to his Kosovans: killing thousands and expelling hundreds of thousands. I do not recall shrill cries from Mr Blair for the bombing of Zagreb. Britain took no action in defence of the Krajina Serbs or the Bosnian minorities, at least until

there is an alternative to world war civil war. Why has it so ferociously espoused the Kosovo Albanians? The question can be answered by appeals to expediency, but Mr Blair yesterday said this was a war of "moral purpose". It is the apparent double-standard that enrages Serb opinion and gathers it, however reluctantly, behind Mr Milosevic.

Yet we are where we are. The gauntlet is down. Robin Cook talks of continuing with bombing "until the job is done". Anything less, he implies, would be nothing short of humiliation for Nato.

Even Henry Kissinger, long an oppo-nent of this intervention, is a convert to the argument. Now that American forces are engaged in combat, he tells the Los Angeles Times, "victory is the only exit strategy" (an ominous phrase from Kissinger-of-Vietnam). But by victory he means ground assault, as the critics of the "bombing alone" strategy have always claimed it would. And on this public statements of Nato and the British Government.

What is now planned on Kosovo's border with Macedonia and Albania is a mystery wrapped in a horror. But a land assault on Kosovo has one virtue. It would close the gaping wound at the heart of Nato's present apologia. Mr Blair was yesterday near frantic to tell the world that the ethnic "cleansing" of Kosovo had nothing to do with the Nato bombing. He said that Mr Milosevic planned it long ago and began it a week before the first bomb fell. Mr Milosevic, in other words, never intended only to crack down on the Kosovo Liberation Army but always meant to cleanse Kosovo of Albanians altogether. It is therefore a calumny against Nato to imply that the refugees are in any sense the result of the bombing.

The trouble with this explanation

licensed by the UN at the end of the is that it implies an even greater calumny against Nato: that it was aware of the risk of humanitarian catastrophe and did nothing effective to stop it. It rejected as "too costly" the one military option capable of stopping it, the swift insertion of a rapid reaction force before the main Serb Army arrived, and recorted instead to the one and resorted instead to the one option most likely to win Serb support for Mr Milosevic, bombing Belgrade. Mr Blair asks us to believe that his colleagues read intelligence warnings of what was about to happen, and then voted for "bombing alone". This was not "doing something about Milosevic but the was pure Munich.

> worth, I cannot believe that Mr Blair and his colleagues were so cynical. I prefer to see them as victims of their own naive intervention in Yugoslavia's internal affairs and the consequent escalation of threats. Ministers who had never seen a gun they are at odds with at least the fired in anger were mesmerised by military bombast about the political impact of "pinpoint accurate, laserguided weapons systems", despite their failure to move President Saddam Hussein in Iraq. Nato gambled that Mr Milosevic would not respond to bombing threats by a pre-emptive strike into Kosovo, but would agree some fudge as he did last October. The gamble failed. The refusal to deploy ground troops when Kosovo was largely undefended now seems cowardly and negligent. Mr Milosevic was invited to call the bluff of the mightiest armies in the world and he did. I repeat, the war party has not done something about Milosevic". ft has done nothing about him. The only honourable thing to do now is properly to go to war with him, yet British politicians still cannot stomach this logical outcome of their posture. Nato has been witness to, if not party to, the displacement of almost a million Kosovans. Its response is not to restore them to their land but to destroy the oil and power, the roads, factories, bridges, trains and radio stations of a sizeable European state. Mr Milosevic may be "degraded" but he is politically impregnable, while the supposed beneficiary of this effort. Kosovo, is rendered a wasteland.

Having pulled Mr Milosevic on to the punch, the coherent policy would at least be to punch him properly — a policy to which gung-ho American opinion appears to be dragging the British Government But such a policy must be mad. The most it could attain is some heavily fortified "safe havens" in Kosovo. It would drag into the fight every Slav nationalist, not least from Russia. It would also send a signal to any separatist movement that if it can provoke enough mayhem to "threaten a humanitarian disaster", bellicose Nato politicians will come rushing to its aid. A dozen such groups must be enviouswatching the KLA's booming armouries at present. This is not "world policing" but anarchy.

ato had no business in half-heartedly sponsoring negotiations over Kosovan autonomy. It was not invited to do so, and made a hash of it. It has no more business in Romania or Kurdistan or Azerbaiian or, for that matter. Basque Spain or Northern Ireland. Kosovo's autonomy remains where it was when Britain "recognised" the new, truncated Yugoslavia: at the mercy of Mr Milosevic. To invade its deserted valleys and try to bold them against Serb forces would be costly and pointless. To subject Serbia to an indefinite, purely punitive blitz would be obscene. My answer to the question "what to do?" is therefore the same as it was last October. It is not to draw lines you have not the will to defend at proportionate cost. Non-intervention in foreign civil wars, coupled with generous aid to sufferers, has been normal British policy in the past. Most recently it has been policy in Ethlopia, Rwanda, Sudan, Palestine, Sri Lanka and Afghanistan. This is not a policy of cowardice or appeasement. Mr Milosevic is a nasty job of work but he is not Hitler or Stalin. He does not merit a third world war. comment@the-times.co.uk

CLEAR TARGETS

Why there can be no let-up in the bombing

Three weeks into an air war that many Western politicians hoped might be over in days, Nato has yet to make more than a small impact on the murderous Serb campaign in Kosovo. The Yugoslav Army is still bombarding villages, which Slobodan Milosevic's secret police and paramilitary forces can then empty and burn. Periodically, the Serbs reopen the borders to let through clumps of fugitives. Perhaps 600,000 more are trapped in Kosovo's mountains, probably without shelter, medicines or food. Air power cannot see or help them. But in the great Pannonian plain of the Yugoslav heartland, Nato airstrikes are having an increasingly devastating effect.

For nearly a decade. Mr Milosevic has flattened cities and entire communities in Croatia, Bosnia and now Kosovo; but this is the first time that the citizens of Belgrade, Novi Sad or Nis have had to endure the physical terrors of bombardment. Their suffering does not begin to be commensurate; where Serb forces and police deliberately hunted down non-combatants. Nato has put the avoidance of civilian casualties ahead of military effectiveness. In a battle of will as well as skill, the military value of every target has been set against the risks of civil damage. Knowing this, the military leaders are dispersing equipment to farms, woods and towns and siting anti-aircraft batteries in residential areas. Mr Milosevic's special police are taking over schools.

That, and the intensification of airstrikes, will raise the death toll. But tens of thousands more will lose their jobs as more factories are destroyed. The economic damage to Yugoslavia is already huge and will become crippling. Nato started bombing with only 200 aircraft and a narrowly defined range of targets; but General Wesley Clark could soon have 1,000 planes. If Mr Milosevic does not yield, he will literally, as well as politically, have ensured the destruction of his country. Despite this grim prospect, there has so far been little argument in Nato about what targets are legitimate. That is because before the campaign started, the military laid out its plans in detail, placing every target before the North Atlantic Council which then scrutinised and grouped them in terms of a graduated strategy. The agreed military concept was based on the recognition that the mobile columns and small paramilitary formations in Kosovo are hard to destroy from the air. The aim is therefore to cripple these forces by attacking the entire support system on which modern military operations rely.

The longer the campaign lasts, therefore, the grimmer will be its economic impact. Tanks cannot move without fuel: but nor can tractors, and Nato claims to have destroyed 70 per cent of Yugoslav petrol, oil and lubricant stocks. Factories turning out military trucks may also make cars; a bridge at Novi Sad carried fibre optic cables, but also commercial traffic: this week's attack on a railway bridge near Leskovac hit a passenger train. As our Defence Editor reports on page 5. Nato has damaged some 200 "target areas", some of them far from Kosovo. This remains an operation under close political control; hence the efforts to spare Montenegro, whose leaders have stood out against the subjugation of Kosovo. But inescapably, this tightening of the military screws will also pulverise the Yugoslav economy.

That is why Mr Milosevic expects Nato to waver. So long as he faces no personal danger, he may hold out whatever the cost to his countrymen; before the airstrikes began, he and his profiteering henchmen and relatives had already reduced the Yugoslav rump to lawless penury. Nato's campaign continues; but at some point it will have to weigh its options. At terrible cost, airstrikes will severely disrupt the Milosevic forces; but the sombre prospect remains that it may take ground troops, backed by massive air power, to drive them out of Kosovo. Preparations for that contingency are as urgent as ever.

ON PROBATION

Straw's tough choice looks more like a soft option

manacling, albeit gentle, it has to be seen as one of a range of punishments which might follow conviction for a criminal offence. Prison may work, but not in every case. Instead of incarceration.. many. offenders are sentenced to up to several hundred hours' work in the community and the intrusive supervision of their daily lives by a probation officer. But the feeling persists among many that the convict who walks out of the courtroom with just a probation order is practically a free man.

Last August Jack Straw, the Home Secretary, promised to toughen probation. A Home Office paper on co-operation between prisons and the Probation Service emphasised that punishment was a central part of the probation process. It set out plans for a National Corrections Policy Framework and a nationally run Probation Service. The paper even went so far as to suggest a new, more punitive name. It argued that justice should, however it is applied, be seen to be done. These radical proposals gave cause for hope.

A nationally run Probation Service has much to recommend it. This should enable clear standards to be set for probation services all over the country. Also, the reorganisation of local probation services into areas which correspond to police and Crown Prosecution Service boundaries should enable closer co-operation between all the law enforcement agencies.

Effective probation, however, is not easily secured by a central government department. Probation officers rely on their extensive local knowledge, gained from close contact with the criminals whom they supervise. Consequently, local probation

When a court sentences a criminal to services need to be able to make decisions probation, it should not be an easy option. for themselves and to take action quickly. It Probation is not a rap on the knuckles but a is not yet clear whether a national Probation Service will mean a national bureaucracy and long delays as local initiatives are referred back to the Home Office for approval. Mr Straw should take care to ensure that this is not the case and that probation services retain the local autonomy which makes them work.

Mr Straw's stance on his other proposals appears to have softened. His retreat raises questions as to just how determined his reform of probation will be. In his speech to probation officers yesterday, there was no mention of renaming the service. Punishment was replaced by "Reduction of reoffending and a Nadonal Corrections Policy was nowbere to be seen. The only indication that life might become harder for criminals on probation was in Mr Straw's suggestion that probation orders should be enforced in all cases.

Consistency would at least be a step in the right direction. Only a third of breaches of probation orders are acted upon at present. Enforcement is the key to any effective change. A new national Probation Service can set whatever standards it likes. but, unless these are actually acted upon, they will be worthless. It is not yet clear how Mr Straw's standards will be enforced. Meanwhile, the greatest hurdle to change has not yet been cleared: when will Mr Straw find the parliamentary time to push his planned legislation through? In the next parliamentary session he will be concentrating on overhauling the Race Relacions Act after the Lawrence Inquiry. Probation is unlikely to make good election fodder for the year after. The Home Secretary, instead of taking a tough choice, may end up with a soft option.

A BREATH OF FRESH ARIA

Glyndebourne makes a sound move

For all its traditions of social propriety, of opulent picnic hampers and pre-Puccini Pimm's. Glyndebourne treasures a less established, more educative. intent. Although Mozart may have remained since the 1930s a mainstay of each season, the work of less familiar composers is often scheduled too. Directors are keen to dispel rumours that their productions are as easy on the palate as a glass of chilled Sancerre. And Glyndebourne's 1994 auditorium the first British purpose-built opera house since John Christie incorporated the original theatre into his Elizabethan mansion fifty years before - improved the acoustics as well as the seating capacity. It should not simply serve, its directors insist.

as a museum to classical pieces. Of course, as divas warm up at wistaria twined casements, any cummerbunded corporate types picnicking below may enjoy humming along to familiar arias as teaspoons of caviare slip deliciously down. But Glyndebourne's programme should amount to far more than the provision of a seasonal cultural perk for the fat cat whose company made a block booking. Nicholas Snowman, the new general director of the opera house, puts a more challenging ethos to the test. He aims to th of fresh aria to the stage.

Celebrated old favourites will still be performed but, as we report on our arts pages today, Mr Snowman is on an ambitious mission to promote more esoteric works. He plans to revive Harrison Birtwistle's massive electronic opera The Mask of Orpheus, to commission the young British composer Thomas Ades, and to première What Next?, a complex new miniature opera by the American Elliott Carter. Even with the most commonly hummed composers, he will delve into the archives, reviving neglected works of Monteverdi with period instruments and embarking on a German Romantic project involving several 19th-century works previously considered unredeemable. Mr Snowman takes exciting risks - not least at the box office. Often tastes are fine-tuned by familiarity. Palates are limited by lack of directorial daring. An introduction to a broader, more dissonant, cultural repertoire may chime with many imaginations. The intimacy of Glyndebourne lends itself to such individualistic enjoyment. As for any disappointed hummers out for a free supper in the sunset. they can pack an extra bottle of Pouilly Furné in their picnic baskets and snooze comfortably through the performance - as indeed they have traditionally done.

Critics question Nato's campaign and its objectives

From Professor Sir Michael Howard

Sir. Professor Lawrence Freedman's article (April 9) about possible settlements for the Kosovo question raises some profoundly important issues for the conduct of the campaign.

Our ultimate objective, surely, is neither the resettlement of the refugees nor the punishment of Milosevic, but the creation of a stable settlement in the Balkans. This may best be done by the creation of a Nato protectorate over the whole of Kosovo, irrespective of the wishes of Serbia, or by some kind of agreed partition.

I am not an expert on the Balkans, but I can see the disadvantages of a condominium exercised by 19 or more Allies over a region that would still contain a resentful minority of Serbs, with an angry and revengeful homeland just beyond a long and indefensible border - a homeland made angrier and more revengeful with every bomb now being dropped. It seems a perfect recipe for a prolonged guerrilla war that would certainly keep Nato in business for the next century or so; but that is hardly the object of the exercise.

The alternative is a negotiated settlement that Serbia can live with, even if it does not sadsfy the maximal demands of either side. The danger is that public opinion in the West is now becoming so heated that any compromise settlement will be condemned as surrender or, worse, "appeasement" and no Allied leader will dare to recommend it. But the longer the war goes on, the less likely it is that this option will remain open.

Sometimes making peace requires as much courage as waging war.

Yours etc. MICHAEL HOWARD, The Old Farm. Eastbury, Hungerford RG177JN. April 13.

Sir. Many with military experience are bewildered as to how today's military leaders have allowed Nato's political leaders to get themselves into such a mess over Kosovo. They, and I, do not understand how Nato's military leaders can have allowed the organisation to embark on a military strategy that has been nothing short of an outrageous gamble given the political objectives set for it.

Against the humanitarian objectives given by the Prime Minister at the outset, the strategy has already failed. The political objectives of containment have failed. The objective of reinforcing regional stability is being met by crises in Macedonia, Albania, Montenegro and Greece. On the day the bombing started George Robertson told the House of Commons Defence Committee:

Our military objective - our clear, simple, military objective - will be to reduce the Serbs' capability to oppress the Albanian population and thus 10 avert a humanitarian disaster.

Who advised him that this could be achieved?

The Chief of Defence Staff, General Sir Charles Guthrie, has enthusiastically made the case for the current strategy in newspaper articles and at the daily press conferences. When ! asked the Defence Secretary on March 31 in the House to name a single independent commentator who believed that Nato's military strategy would deliver its political objectives, he took refuge behind the advice of the Chief of Defence Staff.

There remains a disconnect between the military strategy and the new political objectives of restoring the situation in Kosovo in the wake of the humanitarian catastrophe precipitated once Milosevic decided to take Nato on. The use of air power alone continues to be an irresponsible gamble as far as these new objectives are concerned. There is no clarity about how the military means willed so far can achieve the aim. Instead there is a classic case of mission creep, for example with the introduction of Apache helicopters and Multiple Launch Rocket Systems (report, April 12).

If Nato articulated a military strategy that, however long it took, would deliver its political objectives, the view from Belgrade would be very dif-ferent. There is no sign of this happening.

It is my judgment that it is un-reasonable to expect the Armed Forces to continue to have confidence in the military advice being given to ministers by their chief military adviser. I have very reluctantly come to the conclusion that this should be said publicly. We need a new strategy and a new chief to articulate it.

Yours faithfully, CRISPIN BLUNT, House of Commons.

We should immediately cease the bombing. We should seal off the area with strong Nato forces on the key borders in order to help the regional governments to maintain order and stability. We should provide massive humanitarian help where we are able. By this action Nato will have achieved order and been seen to achieve order.

Thank you always,

From the Reverend Ian Stratton

Sir. When Burma became independent on January 4, 1948, Briosh Forces personnel sailed from Rangoon in the SS Empire Trooper. The servicemen on board received a surprise when the voice of the Officer Commanding Troops came over the Tannoy system, not with the expected disciplinary notices but describing the gulls following the ship and enthusing about one among them, a vagrant of a species normally found in northern waters.

One of those servicemen later became a birdwatcher himself, but unol reading your obituary notice of Lieutenant-Colonel C. L. Boyle (April he never knew the name of the enthusiast who had first shown him the joy the hobby can give, and the influence that sharing the joy can have.

Yours faithfully. IAN STRATTÓN, 20 Bradley Road, Warminster, Wiltshire BAI2 8BP.

Scottish victory

From Mr Alasdair Hunter

Sir. After the shenanigans before the start of the Five Nations Championship over England's participation, how correct has the decision to reinstate them been seen to be.

My fellow Scots (and probably not a few Welsh or Irish) would, I'm sure, agree that winning a tournament that did not include England would be a hollow victory indeed.

Yours faithfully. ALASDAIR HUNTER. Chequers Lodge, Chequers Close,

Grimston, King's Lynn PE32 IAT. April II.

From Mr James Macdonald

Sir. The European Union may have its flag, but it lacks a patron saint. With the European Central Bank's inflexible control in mind, I propose the tyrant Procrustes. His chop or stretch methods of harmonisation make him the ideal candidate.

Yours faithfully, JAMES MACDONALD. 58 Clifford Avenue. Taunton, Somerset TA2 6DL

Otherwise engaged

From Mr P. D. Doherty

Sir. What freak of circumstance renders the inaptly named customer care service lines of service providers permanently engaged, or otherwise unobtainable, while their sales/marketing lines are always open and readily accessible?

Yours faithfully, P. D. DOHERTY, 5 Tancred Road, Luton, Bedfordshire LU2 7XA. April 13.

Civil legal aid Last in the field

From the Director of Victim Support Sir, The Access to Justice Bill returns to the House of Commons on Wednesday, April 14. Yet some of its provisions seem to conflict with the Protection from Harassment Act - a previous piece of Labour government erslation. The Act provides special protection for victims of racial harassment, stalking and domestic violence, often by way of an injunction gained through the civil courts. However, the new legislation priorioses civil legal aid only to victims of direct violence. Victims of harassment - a problem which has only recently been recognised - are left unprotected. We hope the Government will look at this again during the time that the Bill remains in the Commons in order to ensure that civil legal aid is equally available for all victims requiring protection from harassment.

Yours faithfully. HELEN REEVES. Director, Victim Support, Cranmer House, 39 Brixton Road. SW9 6DZ. April 12,

From the Deputy Bailiff of Jersey

Sir, In your report on the Scottish elections (April 9) you described Culloden as "the last real |my italics| battle fought on British soil". Last year 1 approached (with some trepidation) an enormous Scots guardian at Culloden and spoke with some indignation, as a naove Jerseyman, of the Battle of Jersey, January 1781. He fixed me with a withering look: "This was the last pitched battle on British

"Real?" "Pitched?" What then was the Battle of Jersey, immortalised by Copley's great painting in the Tate Yours faithfully, hensive school head of music to an independent boarding school 22 years ago, partly because I saw where the local education authority music provision was leading (letter, April 5). At the time I was criticised for furthering musical elitism. Who is encouraging elitism now? State school parents pay up to 50 per cent more for the same lessons as my own school. The children in our new prep school will be able to start musical instruments on a one-to-one basis at below the state cost, and this is just the age to encourage learning - strings

LORD STOTT

Lord Stott, Lord Advocate, 1964-67, and Senator of the College of Justice in Scotland, 1967-84, died on April 12 aged 89. He was born oo December 22, 1909.

ord Stott was a man of independent mind who was not afraid to take on the legal establishment. His diaries, published intermittently after his retirement, were an oddly entertaining mixture of the profound and the banal, of political reflection and mere gossip. They were far from flattering about many of his judicial colleagues, but cast as much light on his own character.

George Gordon Stott was the youngest son of the Rev Dr G. Gordon Stott, minister of Cramond, near Edinburgh. He was educated at Cramond School, Edinburgh Academy and Edinburgh University, where he was admitted to the Faculty of Advocates in 1936.

He became active in Labour poliocs. and as a conscientious objector when war broke out he was sent to work in farm in Fife, he was appointed a milk recorder and toured the country, rising with the lark to log the yields.

He appeared free of charge before the tribunals on behalf of many other conscientious objectors and from 1939 to 1944 edited the Edinburgh Clarion, the journal of Edinburgh West Labour Party. which appeared with the subtitle "For socialism and peace". The sincerity of his pacifism was generally acknowledged and proved no hindrance to his career. He was a member of the Monopolies Commission. 1949-56, and took silk in 1950.

He soon acquired a certain celebrity in legal circles for his courage in confronting Lord Clyde, who had become Lord President in 1954 and was habitually rude and imperious. Ston's diary described him as "the worst judge that one could imagine" and deplored his habit of committing his "extempore" judgments to writing in advance and "concussing" his fellow judges into agreeing with him. Stott was scornful of those who passively agriculture. After his first posting, to a did so. He had the temerity to appeal against many of Lord Clyde's judgments to the House of Lords, and was consistently successful.

When he himself became a judge in 1967, he continued to oppose Clyde's diktats, particularly over civil damages. In the Scottish courts these had been held far below the level in England. Some senior judges took a perverse pride in what they regarded as a tradition of honest poverty. Lord Stott perceived that not only was this inequitable, but it would ultimately bring the law of Scotland into disrepute by driving people to seek redress in the other jurisdiction.

made his point in the case of McCallum v Paterson. A woman seriously injured in a car accident had been awarded damages of £23,000 by a jury. A bench of three judges had ordered a new trial on the ground that the award Stott's charge to the jury at the second trial ran contrary to the orthodoxy and he persuaded them to maintain the award at £22,000. This was again set aside by the First Division, and the pursuer eventually settled out of court for £10,000, a result Stott described as "most unfortunate". He did not abandon his campaign, and when a similar case came before him the following year he was able to award a large sum of damages. Scottish damages now more or less conform to English standards.

In 1964 Stott had been appointed Lord Advocate in the Wilson Government. He did not find the duties of Scotland's chief law officer particularly onerous, but derived sacrical pleasure from the foibles of the senior Labour politicians he encountered. Patrick Gordon Walker "waffled away as usual, assuring us with obvious truth that he had a completely open mind". He became disillusioned by Wilson's drift away from socialism and support for the Americans in Vietnam. and when a vacancy arose on the Bench he brought his brief career in politics to a close. But then in 1972 he found himself on

In a divorce case, Stott ruled against William Cordiner, a well-known criminal with a string of convictions. Cordiner had conducted his own case, and when the judgment went against him began to shout abusive threats at the judge and the entire court. Stott had him taken below in handcuffs and then sentenced him to three years' imprisonment for contempt, a decision denounced by Bernard Levin in this newspaper as "savage". Cordiner spent almost five months in prison before eventually being released on appeal.

After Stott's retirement in 1984, his diaries began to appear. Lord Advocate's Diary (1992) and Judge's Diary (1995) both reveal a relish for the culture of the vernacular (he had the occasional habit, in court, of breaking into broad Scots). A cerain parsimoniousness - on one occasion he records climbing a fence rather than paying for entry to a local gymkhana - contrasts with his acts of spontaneous generosity. He once sent a cheque for £500 out of his own pocket, to a woman who had lost her arm in a spin-dryer. He had represented her, but she had not, he felt, been given justice.

He is survived by his wife Nancy. whom he married in 1947, and by their son and one daughter.

SQUADRON LEADER H. B. 'MICKY' BELL-SYER

Squadron Leader H. B. "Micky" Bell-Syer, AFC, fighter and test pilot. died on March 12 aged 80. He was born oo December 9, 1918.

BLINDED and badly burnt when his Hurricane was shot down over France in May 1940. Micky Bell-Syer made a remarkable recovery and was later able to undertake some of the most dangerous test-flying of the war. He was awarded his Air Force Cross in 1942 for top secret work he did at the Armament and Experimental Establishment at Boscombe

This involved him and the handful of pilots selected for the work in taking off and landing with lethal cargoes of materials for a chemical weapons programme which, fortunately, never had to be activated in the struggle against Germany. The citation for Bell-Syer's AFC acknowledged "the taking of risks not required of any other pilots in the Service".

Herbert Benjamin Bell-Syer (who loathed his Christian names) joined the RAF from school in 1937. In May 1940 he was posted to No 73 Squadron. whose Hurricanes had been in France since September the previous year as part of the Advanced Air Striking Force. When the German Blitzkrieg began on May 10. No 73 was immediately in the thick of the action against the overwhelming tactical air power which supported the German advance into France and the Low Countries.

On May 24 Bell-Syer was flying one of four Hurricanes on patrol in the Cambrai area when they spotted a force of 30 Heinkel bombers supported by an equal number of Messerschmitt 110 fighters, heading to attack British and French troops on the ground. Unde-terred by the odds, the Hurricanes wheeled into the attack and two of their number. including Bell-Syer's, were shot down. Baling out of his

seen descending rapidly with a large rent in his parachute. He was posted as missing and was assumed to have been killed.

In fact, he had landed, if not safely, at least alive. And when on June 6, with the Dunkirk evacuation complete, one of his colleagues was sent to search for other downed 73 Squadron pilots in French hospitals that had not yet been overrun, he found Bell-Syer lying badly wounded and burnt in a hospital near Le Mans. With the signing of an Armistice in June, Bell-Syer was evacuated in a two-day grace period.

He was blinded, badly disfigured with burns to the face and hands, and had a severe shrapnel wound. A recovery complete enough to enable him to return to flying certainly could not have been predicted. But at Sir Archibald Mac-Indoe's famous burns unit at East Grinstead he eventually recovered his sight and, thanks to the surgeon's legen-dary skill, his handsome face was returned to normal.

Bell-Syer was enabled to return to flying early in 1941 and his exceptional skill as a pilot commended him to Boscombe Down, where he spent a good deal of the remainder of the war testing all sorts of aircraft. These ranged from biplanes to high-performance interceptor fighters and fourengined bombers.

He retired from the RAF as a squadron leader in 1947 and then went to Hawker Siddeley as a test pilot. By the time he retired from Hawker Siddeley 17 years later he had flown more than 80 different types of aircraft in his career.

In 1966 he joined the David McCall bloodstock agency. which was also the racing manager for Charles Engle-hart, a breeding and racing empire spanning Europe. South Africa and America. A great bon vivant, Bell-Syer was responsible for entertaining clients, something he did with great style. Micky Bell-Syer married, in 1943, Elizabeth (Lady Burgh). divorced wife of the 6th Baron Burgh. This marriage was dissolved. He is survived by his companion of the last 18 years, Patricia Lady Foley.

Boxcar Willie. country music singer, died of leukaemia on April 12 aged 67. He was born on September 1, 1931.

IN little more than a decade "the world's favourite hobo" made 15 gold and four platinum albums, with titles like Boxcar Willie's Truck Driving Songs and King of the Freight Train. He was perhaps best known for his version of King of the Road, but was happy to indulge every kind of sentiment, from Achy Breaky Heart to How Great Thou Art and Jesus Makes House Calls. He probably meant it all.

Lecil Travis Martin, born in Sterratt, near Dallas, Texas, was naturally keen to change his name and to run away from home. Known at first as Marty Martin, he often skipped school to "ride the rails", seeing America from the freight trains, and adopting their whistle as part of his repertoire. His father was a farmer who played the fiddle on his porch, and lent a hand on the railways - so he could sing Daddy Was a Railroad Man with pride.

He grew up admiring the genuine country singing of Jimmie Rodgers, Hank Wil-bams and Lefty Frizzell, and in his teens he played guitar and sang in jamborees all over Texas. He recorded an album in the late 1950s: Marty Martin Sings Country Music and Stuff Like That. It was not enough to make him famous, though, and he was to spend 22 years in the US Air Force. clocking up a huge mileage as a flier. Later, he was loyal to the Services, and maintained his links through numerous organisations.

BOXCAR WILLIE

Boxcar Willie: outside his theatre in Branson, Missouri, in 1997

When he retired from the Air Force he turned back to music, and set about perfecting the hobo persona, with overalls, battered hat, worn-out shoes and two days' growth of beard. He wrote a song called Boxcar Willie and adopted the name for both an album and himself. At the age of 50 he especially well in Britain, notably at the Wembley country music festivals. He was styled a "world ambassador" for the Hobo Foundation. In 1987 he bought a 900-scat theatre "with authentic charm" in Branson, Missouri, a little town with 3,700 residents, hundreds of country shows, fifty hotels and millions of visitors. This move to America's music show capital, set in the Ozark Mountains, put him in gentle compedon with the Osmonds, Elvis imitators, Whispering Bill, the Lennon Brothers playing "canteen hits" and the Baldknobbers Jamboree (founded 1959), a musical comedy variety revue with sad-sack hillbilly clowns and good ole pickin' and a singin'.

The town may be a collective nostalgic fantasy about rural America, but it turns over money as surely and steadily as a Las Vegas fruit machine. Fans flock. Boxcar Willie performed six times a week for nine months of the year, as well as encouraging newcomers to take to the stage and instructing them on what would work best in that world of rhinestone-studded sincerity. II was quite a shock when fellow country singer David Allan Coe broke ranks to mock Boxcar Willie's name and train whistles.

Willie and his wife composed an enormous number of songs around a small number of themes, but he was most noted for renditions of old favourites such as Wabash Cannonball. and for his duets, with performers such as Carol Lee Cooper and Willie Nelson (who also has a theatre in Branson).

In 1990 he opened the Boxcar Willie Railroad and Airplane Museum, next door to his theatre and convenient for Ripley's Believe It or Not Museum, Ride the Ducks and the Hollywood Wax Museum.

He appeared in the film Sweet Dreams (1985), about Patsy Kline. His ambioon was to raise the Titanic.

He is survived by his wife and their two daughters.

PROFESSOR FRANK LEES

He was appointed to a staff posicion at Loughborough in 1967, and stayed there for the rest of his working life, progressing rapidly to a professorial appointment. His special interest in process safety stemmed from this time but was coloured by his industrial experience. He founded and built up an outstanding research group whose work became internationally known.

He will be best be remembered for his pioneering book Loss Prevention in the Process Industries, which has been translated into several languages, including Japanese and Chinese. He had just completed a revision for a second edition of this work when he was struck down by cancer three years ago. His disonction was recognised by the awards he received from many technical and scienofic bodies. In 1985 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Academy of Engineering and, in 1998, he received an honorary DSc from Loughborough. But he was no narrow-minded specialist. He was widely read and had a wonderful gift of coming up with appropriate quotations on almost any occasion. His learning, sense of humour and modesty are well illustrated by his use in the preface to a new edicion of his book of a quotation from Prince Bulow: The man who never made a mistake never made anything."

ON THIS DAY LANDSLIDE IN WALES A MOVING MOUNTAIN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT) CARDIFF, April 13

in the early hours of yesterday morning has overwhelmed the Powell Duffryn Colliery situated at the base of the mountain and completely blocked the Great Western Railway branch line and the main road to Abertysswg. Most of the surface buildings at the colliery have been wrecked, the ironwork of the pit shaft has been twisted and bent as if by the hand of some monstrous giant, and a considerable length of retaining wall built to protect the colliery premises and has been no loss of life. As stated in The Times, the colliery was closed a few days ago for the ostensible reason that its working had become unremuneraove. but there is no doubt that the decision was largely influenced by the increasing menace to the colliery of the moving mountain overlooking it. Only the officials and skeleton maintenance staff were retained, and the last of these had left the colliery about an hour before the landslide occurred at 2am on Saturday.

The mountain has been giving trouble for many years, and as far back as 1905 there was a considerable landslide which did serious damage to the colliery winding engine house and pit machinery. The trouble then, as now, occurred after a period of heavy rainfall, and was attributed in some quarters to the percolation of water inlo a bed of sand believed to run underneath these mountains for a distance of several miles. The movement, which affects both the Glamorgan and Monmouthshire sides of the Rhymney river, became pronounced a few days ago, and new fissures appeared in the mountain slopes, particularly on the Monmouthshire side.

The first intimations of the impending danger were given on Friday afternoon. when portions of detached earth and stone began to crash down the mountain side. Towards evening the movement accelerated at a pace of 3in a minute, culminating soon after midnight in a tremendous slide, which overwhelmed the road, the railway, and part of the colliery premises below.

Barclays starts search again as O'Neill goes

BY CAROLINE MERRELL BANKING CORRESPONDENT

THE shock departure of Mike O'Neill, Barclays chief executive, after just 18 days in the post, leaves Sir Peter Middleton, the bank's group chief executive, once again desperately seeking a replacement for Martin Taylor, who quit in November last year, with a £1.5 million payoff.

Shares in Barclays initially fell 49p on the news of Mr O'Neill's resignation, but ended trading up 46p on the day at 1919p. The market is taking the view that Barclays without O'Neill could become a takeover target.

After the emergence of the heart complaint over which he resigned, coming after a bout of influenza, Mr O'Neill actually only spent one day in the of-fice in London — and that was the day he resigned.

Sir Peter said yesterday that he intended to go back to the shortlist he had drawn up before appointing Mr O'Neill. went. All the businesses have been doing very well. Shares rise to a record despite Kosovo worries

BY ALASDAIR MURRAY ECONOMICS CORRESPONDENT

THE stock market yesterday shook off concern about the intensifying conflict in Kosovo to hil a record closing high and take its rise this year past 10 per cent.

European markets also gained, playing down re-ports that Serb troops had crossed into Albania and shrugging off rising criticism of the European Central Bank's performance.

Dresdner Bank claimed that last week's ECB rate cut had undermined the fledg-ling central bank's credibility and had increased the chance of a rise in European rates by the end of the year. The markets, bowever, were again encouraged by a bullish mood on Wall Street, where benign economic data helped to ease lingering concern that the US economy may overheat. US consumer prices rose by 0.2 per cent in March, only slightly above the 0.1 per cent recorded in February. Consumer sales growth also eased back to a modest 0.2 per cent. Tesco's performance leaves rivals trailing

TESCO, the largest supermarket group in Britain, revealed yesterday that it is streaking further ahead of J Sainsbury, its nearest rival, with an increase in market share to 15.8 per cent from 15.2 per cent.

Tesco, which reported a £1 billion rise in sales to £18.5 billion for last year, also revealed plans to step up its expansion at home and abroad with investments of £1.3 billion. The move will create 20,000 jobs, half of them overseas. Terry Leahy, chief executive,

One 2 One forced to rethink pre-pay tariffs

Bearing fruit: Terry Leahy, chief executive of Tesco, which has seen its share of the market increase to 15.8 per cent

ONE 2 ONE, Britain's smallest mobile phone company, is to radically reorganise its tariff structures to improve the profitability of its so-called pre-pay customers.

The announcement was made as the company revealed that pre-pay customers - who buy call vouchers instead of signing long-term contracts spend just £200 a year, compared with the £480 a year speni by contract customers. However, One 2 One said that pre-pay customers were cheaper to acquire. The tariff shakeup comes amid turmoil for One 2 One, whose owners, Cable & Wireless and MediaOne, are considering a trade sale or a floal of the company. One 2 One's new tariffs - to be launched on April 29, with an £8 million advertising campaign - will see pre-pay call prices cut from 40p a minute to 10p or 2p a minute, depending on whether calls are made during peak time or off-peak time. Prices will be the same for national and local calls. However, the new pre-pay tariffs will include a "daily charge", starting at 50p, which means that pre-pay customers will effectively pay the same in monthly line rental as contract customers. For the time being, One 2 One will continue to offer its 40p-a-minute pre-pay service without daily charges. Tim Samples, managing director, said: "This is a new prepay approach. We are simplify-ing tariffs and reducing the cost of calling. Three-and-a-half million people have gone to pre-pay so far. What we want to do is grow that market and increase our share of it." He added that he wanted to persuade One 2 One customers to use their mobile phones in-stead of their fixed-line BT phones, and said there was "no evidence" to suggest mobile handsets were a health threat. One 2 One will also offer its contract customers 10p and 2pa-minute call charges. Monthly line rentals will range from £15, with no free calls, to £25, with 1,200 minutes of free offpeak calls. The company also said it would soon introduce a mobile phone e-mail service.

Freeserve chief named

DIXONS GROUP yesterday appointed John Pluthero, a 35-year-old accountant, as chief executive of Freeserve, its free Internet access business.

The appointment was announced just 24 hours after Dixons revealed that it had hired Credit Suisse First Boston and Cazenove & Co to advise on a potential stock market flotation of Freeserve.

Dixons said that Mr Pluthero had "formulated the group's Internet strategy and devised, developed and launched Freeserve". He has a first class degree in economics from the London School of Economics and is a qualified consultant. Analysts estimate that Free-

KVAERNER launched a massive restructuring programme yesterday which will shrink the Anglo-Norwegian engineering group by a third, cost its shareholders Kr4 billion (£330 million) and lead to the loss of 25,000 jobs

In an attempt to reverse years of mismanagement and the financial effects of its £904 million bid for Trafalgar House, Kvaerner plans to quit shipbuilding, cutting its annual revenues by Kr.25 billion to create a slimmer com-

tracting. Kvaerner is dramatically reversing the near-suicidal expansion plan of three years ago, when il bought Trafalgar House, taking on huge debts and extraneous assets, such as the Cunard cruise line, which it has since sold. In October the board ousted former chief executive Erik Tonseth.

His successor, Kjell Almskog, yester-day said that shipbuilding would be a drain on profits for the foreseeable future. Kvaerner has set itself the task of reversing last year's Krl.35 billion loss to a profit of between Kr500 million to asked to fund the new strategy with a

THE future of RJB Mining, Britain's higgest coal producer, was secured yesterday when it won a £1.3 hillion contract from National Power. However, much of the agreement to huy up to 28 million tonnes of coal from RJB hinges on opoons for the huge Drax power station, which is being sold.

The new owners of Drax. which burns 10 million tonnes of coal a year and supplies 10 per cent of England and Wales's power, could choose to buy supplies from overseas. It is thought that up to 14 million tonnes of the deal are only opcontracts.

The four-year deal comes on top of an 18-million tonne, three-year agreement signed last year between Naoonal Power and RJB — taking the full contract to five years.

The price is thought to be 120p a gigajoule, in line with previous contracts with PowerGen and Eastern and about 20 per cent lower than prices commanded last year by RJB under old contracts.

If Naconal Power and the new Drax owners take all 46 million tonnes, RJB will be left with overcapacity of one to two million tonnes. However, with the closure of two mines owned by an independent mining company and the possibility of increasing sales to indus-trial markets. RJB could reasonably expect to find extra sales in the short term.

Richard Budge, chief execu-tive of RJB, said that all collieries had now been saved from the threat of closure on market grounds, although geological factors were not so certain. He said the deal would "enable us to plan our mining operations in the most cost- effective way for some years to come".

There have been claims that because the market, rather than policy, dictates Britain's energy mix, RJB cannot make long-term investment plans. However, Mr Budge said: "We have contracts stretching over four years. How many FTSE companies have that?" Graham Brown, National Power's managing director, said that there could be scope for further purchases under the long-term deal.

John Battle, Energy Minister, said: "It's welcome news that National Power, like other major generators, has recognised the value of UK coal in providing flexible and secure supplies in an increasingly competitive market."

The Government's Energy White Paper, published last year, was triggered by a crisis looming in coalmining as gas displaced coal in the generat-ing market. Ministers set a de facto moratorium on new gasfired power stations, but last week did a U-turn by allowing House price gap

THE gap between house prices in London and the rest of the South East is now wider than it was at any time in the 1980s housing boom, according to the Nationwide Building Society's latest quarterly review. It indicates that house prices in London are now 20 per cent higher than the South East and nearly two and half times, on average, higher than the North. The society has lifted its forecast for house price inflation this year from 2.5 per cent to 4.5 per cent because of an improvement in consumer confidence after recent cuts in base rates.

Chairman Andrew Buxton will not, however, hold up his retirement. Not that he is leaving the bank. Mr Buxton will now assume a lucrative consultancy role. His apparent value to the bank's Far East operations has come as a revelation to some Barclays' watchers, but a consultancy is not an uncommon perk for those who are not yet ready to live on a pension. And Mr Buxton had agreed to make way for Sir Peter Middleton, the former Treasury mandarin who was ready for a bank chairmanship.

Sir Peter, already acting chief executive, will just have to combine his acting with the chairman-ship. Yesterday, he was indicat-ing that he did not think he would be doing so for very long but in making the next appointment, Barclays has to be careful that it does not look as if it is being panicked into a rash appointment. Contenders for the chief executive's role know the going rate for the job and may feel they have Barclays over a barrel in agreeing terms. They might not all, however, find it easy to match Mr O'Neill's commitment. He did, after all, but £5 million of Barclay shares once his appointment was confirmed. It has turned out to be a wise investment. Enthusiasm over his recruitment sent the shares upwards; his abrupt resignation has sent them further skywards. Mr O'Neill has now made £1 million on his stake, thanks to the market's view that Barclays now looks vulnerable to a bid. It may be that Royal Bank of Scotland will fulfil the punters' wish-

Kvaerner's victims of optimism

nder the expansive Anglophile Erik Tönseth. Kvaerner long seemed too good to be true. Time and again, the Norwegian group would buy heavy engineering yards that seemed suited only for the knacker, relying on low buy-ing prices, high debt and cash-flow to make them pay. This expansive, job-saving phi-

Clyde. It made Kvaerner the big-gest shipbuilder in Europe, as well as owner of a yard in America, where they prosper under statutory protection.

Then came the great leap forward by the purchase of Trafalgar House, the engineering con-glomerate whose nervous share-holders were eager to take £820 million of Norwegian cash. With one, debt-laden, bound, Kvaern-er had become a world-scale com-pany, even if badly undercapital-ised for its scale of operations.

Business historians will doubtless long argue whether Trafal-gar was the classic bid too far or if the rot spread from the old un-profitable Norwegian businesses that Mr Tönseth was trying to di-versify away from. After a huge loss and Mr Tonseth's fall last autumn, it became clear that Kvaerner was too good to be true and that waking from the dream was going to be painful.

All involved will suffer. Sharelosophy was not confined to the holders are being asked to cough up new capital to replace heavy write-offs made under the new boss's shrinkage plan.

The Clyde may pay a heavier price. The Govan yard, its remaining big league shipbuilder, is in good shape but has few orders. That will not make it easy to sell when yards all across Europe, some with better immediate prospects, are also for sale.

European Shipbuilding is also under pressure. Last year, Kore-an and Japanese yards were neck and neck, winning a com-bined 74 per cent of orders, in terms of tonnage, against Europe's 17 per cent. And the total market shrank by a seventh. Only orders for cruise ships are booming and the UK no longer makes them on any scale. In the short term even China, the new power in shipbuilding, is suffering from Korea's forced devaluation. In the long run, Koreans are trying to switch away from cheap tonnage and leave tankers to China. That means moving to build ships with higher added value in which European yards specialise. Some at least of Kvaerner's dis-carded British assets should find new owners. But their employees should beware of another optimistic new Kaverner.

The wrong kind of contrition

s commuters gulped their breakfast yesterday before rushing to the station in the hope that, at some stage, a train might appear, they may have suffered a sense of humour failure. For those who breakfast-ed to the accompaniment of Radio 4's Today programme would have heard Gerald Corbett boasting of the fine performance being achieved by Railtrack.

Those facing an indeterminate wait for a train might have con-sidered that Railtrack's acknowl-edged responsibity for the late running of 40 per cent of trains would be a cause of some embarrassment to Mr Corbett. On the contrary, however. The Railtrack chief executive gave every impression of believing that his company was doing a good job. Mr Corbett is a positive thinker and prefers to dwell on the fact that Railtrack's performance was even worse before privatisation. That argument will not be appreciated by those commuters who know that if their own standard of performance merits just a 60 per cent score, then they will not have to worry about commuter trains for long.

Railtrack investors have prospered at the expense of travellers. Mr Corbett now makes much of the £27 billion that he will be investing to improve things but results, not promises, are necessary. Tom Winsor, the new regulator, has made it clear that he will take a tough line. As an ini-tial response, Mr Corbett would be well advised to show a little

Pre-pay predicament

CONSUMERS can still beat the marketing folk, for a while. One 2 One devised a tariff using pre-payment cards to attract a new class of customer to mobile phones: people who want to be in touch but also want to be sure they do not run up big surprise bills. The promotion seemed a great success. Vast numbers signed up but the new customers have duly failed to run up huge bills, so there is no money in it for One 2 One. Naturally, the tariffs are being reorganised to con-found the pesky customers.

Five vie to buy Havas's poster combine

By RAYMOND SNODDY MEDIA EDITOR

Herahead

THE £600 million bid battle for Europe's biggest outdoor advertising business has entered its closing stages with of-fers coming in for the outdoor operations of Havas, which indude Mills & Allen in the UK.

With final offers due to be in by Friday week, five compa-nies have already submitted bids of more than £500 million. The winning bid is expected to approach £600 million.

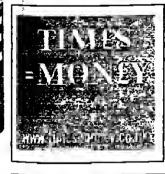

The five in the final round are: Clear Channel Communications, owner of More O'Ferrall in the UK: TDI, owned by CBS of the US and which has London Underground and bus advertising contracts in the UK; JC Decaux, the specialisi bus shelter advertising. Outdoor Systems International of the US; and Texas Pacific, a US venture capital group. Havas, which is owned by Vivendi, formerly Generale des Eaux, put its outdoor advertising businesses up for sale in November after deciding to concentrate on publishing and multimedia activities. The businesses being sold include companies in nine European countries, including the UK. France, Spain and Italy, as well as Sky Sites, the international airport advertising group. Havas says that it wants to sell the operations to a single buyer that must be free of regulatory problems. If Clear Channel or TDI were to win. Mills & Allen would almost certainly have to be sold because of UK monopoly problems. Clear Channel has 26 per cent of the UK market, TDI 22 per cent and Mills & Allen 15 per cent. A manage ment buyout of Mill & Allen would then be a possibility. The ability to buy Europe's largest outdoor advertising in a single package would be particularly attractive to Americans wanting to enter the European market.

Clarks board to ballot family and shareholders on flotation

By Sarah Cunningham RETAIL CORRESPONDENT

THE BOARD of the C&J Clark shoe group is planning to ballot members of the family that controls it to find out whether they wish to see the business floated on the Stock Exchange. Tim Parker, chief executive of the group, which is based in Somerset, said that restructuring work was almost complete and that sales were growing fast enough for flotation to be a realistic option.

The company revealed yesthe company revealed yes-terday that sales grew 6.6 per cent last year to £792 million, leading to operating profit be-fore exceptional items of £425 million, a 7.9 per cent increase.

Roger Pedder, chairman, said: "We could float now. We have a profit record that would allow it, but we don't think the time is propitious. There have been no new lists or any for six months."

The board would need 75 per cent of shareholders to vote in favour of flotation. A secret ballot of the 5,600 shareholders has been planned and will probably take place in the second half of next year. If it receives a mandate, the board will make the final decision on the timing of a flotation. The 400 Clarks family members control 68 per cent of the group's equity. Mr Parker said: "From a company point of view we don't need cash. We don't need to be a public company. It is a

Mr Pedder said: "Although we are agnostic because it is a shareholder matter, if we are going to be a world player and in a couple of years we will be 50-50 UK and non-UK sales - we may need to float." Restructuring costs last year, including the closure of three factories in the UK and the sale of the Australian retail business, cost £33 million. Mr Parker said that he did not expect to see further large restructuring charges this year. The best performance last year came from the Clarks and K retail chains, which saw like-for-like sales increase of 11.2 per cent. US operating profits dropped from £11 million to £9.2 million as a result of tough trading conditions, and the 190-shop retail business is being trimmed back. Nonetheless, Mr Parker said that C&J Clark was now looking at acquisition opportunities, particularly in the US

Ashcroft seeks to withdraw offer for CSG BY PAUL DURMAN

MICHAEL ASHCROFT, the at CSG has complicated an alwealthy financier, is seeking to withdraw his £250 million takeover offer for Corporate Services Group, after three directors of the troubled employment company yesterday bowed to shareholder pressure to resign.

It appears the Takeover Panel is considering forcing Mr Ashcroft to proceed with the offer, even though it was made on condition that there were no changes to the CSG board. Mr Ashcroft is on holiday, apparently having abandoned inierest in CSG.
The Panel and Mr Ash-

croft's advisers at Rea Brothers are disputing whether it is reasonable for him to withdraw the offer solely on the basis of board changes.

New Carlisle, the bid vehimerger of Mr Ashcroft's Nasdag and AIM-listed interests. continued to pursue its interest in CSG even after Jeffrey Fowler resigned as its chair-man last Thursday.

Ralph Hulbert, who replaced Mr Fowler as chairman. Tim Holland-Bosworth and Ronald de Young also agreed to resign yesterday. The directors were opposed by CSG investors claiming to own more than 60 per cent of the group, but they had delayed resigning in case that should threaten Mr Ashcroft's offer. Mr Ashcroft's intervencion

CABLE & WIRELESS is to invest $670 million (£420 million) in the US Internet business it bought from MCI WorldCom last year, in a bid to stop customers defecting to rival networks. The investment, which C&W says will create "the industry's fastest, high-capacity Internet network backbone", comes amid a bitter legal battle between C&W and MCI. The British company is accusing MCI of breaking various agreements related to the $1.75 billion sale of its Inter-net assets. C&W yesterday insisted that its investment in the US had nothing to do with that spat but admitted that it needed to invest heavily to stop customers moving to rival networks.

City analysts applauded the investment. Jim McCaf-ferty, of SG Securities. said: "It shows that C&W is being a bit more pro-active on the Internet front."

C&W will buy 15,000 miles of so-called "dark fibre" from Level 3 Communications, which will run between 50-plus metropolitan areas. The fibre is "dark" because it has been put in the ground, but not yet plugged into a live network.

Allied Domecq puts for sale sign over John Bull

BY DOMINIC WALSH

ALLIED DOMECQ, the Beef-eater Gin and Firkin pubs group, has hoisted a for sale sign over John Bull, its international pub franchise business, as part of a shake-up of its troubled retailing arm.

The decision to sell John Bull, which has almost 60 pubs in 14 countries, follows a profit warning in January that has wiped more than EI billion from Allied's stock market value. Worse than expected trading from its pubs side was blamed and the company has been conducting a review of the whole business.

John Bull, which was launched in 1990, offers franchisees a quick-build Victorian pub design, which is claimed to recreate "the ambience of the warmth and sociability of the best of British tradition". However, it is being seen as a distraction at a time when the ompany needs to focus on its 3,600 UK pubs, ranging from Firkin and Big Steak managed houses to Vanguard tenancies.

As part of the shake-up of its internacional retailing arm, the five Firkin pubs opened in Holland and France over the past three years have been subsumed into the UK management structure. The group denied suggestions that the five units had been put up for sale. In the UK, the company is reported to be revamping its Firkin chain, moving it away from the youth and student market, while making the concept more attractive to women. The first new-look Firkin is in Cheltenham. It is understood that some Firkin pubs will be debranded.

News of the shake-up comes at a time of heightened specula-tion of a possible demerger of Allied's retailing arm from its spirits division. Although the group has played down the rumours, it has always accepted that a demerger was one of the options at its disposal. It also denied recent reports that its Vanguard operation was being touted around the market.

Law changes 'needed on mis-selling'

THE consumer arm of the Financial Services Authority bas captioned that the protection of the public from further mis-selling will be un-dermined unless changes are made to legislation (Gavin Lumsden writes).

Barbara Saunders, chairwoman of the FSA's Consumer Panel, yesterday told the parliamentary committee examining the Financial Services and Markets Bill that the Bill's general principle that "consumers should take responsibility for their own decisions" should be removed. She said a clause should be introduced requiring financial products to be satisfactory and suitable.

Hopes of £2bn bid for Laporte vanish

By PAUL DURMAN

THE hopes of a £2 billion bid for Laporte were dashed yesterday, a day after the specialty chemicals company announced it was in takeover talks. After Laporte said the talks had ended yesterday morning. its shares slid back 95p to 667 p, having jumped by nearly 30 per cent on Monday. Analysis blamed the collapse of the deal on Hoechst. the German chemicals group that owns 45 per cent of Clariant, the Swiss company identi-fied as the bidder for Laporte. Hoechst is seeking its own merger with Rhone-Poulenc of France, a deal that will create one of the world's largest pharmaceutical groups

It is understood Laporte felt unable to rescue the deal once Clariant signalled it had problems proceeding.

THERE are few easier ways to please the market these days than to sell any business that is even remotely connected to paper and packaging. Scapa Group experienced this first-hand vesterday when its beleaguered shares jumped 23 per cent after it said it was selling its paper products division for £329

Part of the rise came because the sale price came in at a level greater than the entire market capitalisation of Scapa, at Monday's closing price. But the fact that Scapa no longer needs to be concerned about the excess capacity and falling margins that afflict the paper and packaging industry is a blessing.

months. The company's remaining technical tapes business can be valued at about 65p a share using a conservative price/earnings muldple of 11 times. These assumptions lead to a total valuation of 170p a share, which in turn is 18 per cent above yesterday's closing price of 144p. To the bull story can be added the promising organic growth opportunities for the tapes business in North America and the ability to spend up to £80 million on acquisitions. Buy.

Pressac

PRESSAC needed its big acquisition last year to save it from blushing yesterday. Without the benefit of the acgrowth at the interim stage would have looked sickly.

The source of the discomfort in the ongoing business was a fall in sales to the automotive industry, thanks in large part to the disruptions at General Motors. Pressac says that these sales have been delayed rather than lost entirely — and there is no reason to dispute that. But the dependence on acquisitions remains a worry. The shares fell 5 per cent yesterday.

That said, this company has plenty of potential. It has cleverly identified that while car manufacturing is hard business, it can thrive supplying high-specification car parts which enhance, in an obvious and consumer-friendly way, manufacturers' products. Pressac also has growing exposure to the ever-exciting telecorns sector, too.

Tempus recommends that a decent number of Pressac shares be accumulated. But shareholders need to keep a close eye on the performance of the company, and their holdings.

Many anticipated that the euro would be a strong currency in its early days, bolstered by massive flows of investment funds out of the dollar and backed by a European Central Bank that would keep a tight grip on monetary policy to build up its credibility. However, the euro has been more or less permanently weak.

This is not a surprise. It was evident, even as the single currency was born, that Europe was suffermg just like others from the implosion of demand in emerging mar-kets. Weak economies tend to result in weak currencies: that is the beauty of floating exchange rates, designed as they are to act as a natural restorative when things go badly.

Far from helping to bolster the euro, the refusal to cut rates by the ECB until it was far too late, again predictably, was counterproductive. When economies become as evidently weak as parts of euroiand - particularly Germany have become a policy of tight money undermines, rather than bolsters, the currency.

Euro woes should come as no surprise

What we have discovered about the euro over the past 100 days is that it goes up and down according to economic circumstances. It is not unusually gifted just because of the weight of parental expectation at its birth. It is, in short. a currency like any other. The current period of weakness is no more proof of the euro's failure than a bout of strength would have signified its success.

Some are shocked and dismayed by the evident weakness in the German economy. They should not be. The vulnerability of an uncompetitive Germany in the face of failing world demand was perfectly obvious before the euro was launched. It is now common currency (excuse the pun) to talk about the explosive possibility of Germany having to leave EMU some way down the road in order to rebuild its competitiveness. Like Britain with the exchange-rate mechanism, it looks as if Germany has fixed its currency at far too ambitious a level, but cannot devalue.

Germany is doing its best to squeeze through another emergency exit by pushing the case for wage harmonisation (as well as tax harmonisation). It knows that it cannot persuade its partners to inflate their wages to German levels out of kindness. So it is, with breathtaking chutzpah, trying to push through wage equalisation by arguing, quite speciously, that this is necessary to make monetary union and the single market work. The truth is that if Germany is to get out of the hole it has dug itself (or that has lovingly been prepared for it by Paris), it has to undertake serious structural reform of its economy, and fast. Some optimists saw the dramatic departure of Oskar Lafontaine as the necessary removal of an important burdle to reform. However, there is little sign that Hans Eichels is any more likely to dismantle the European social welfare state or reform labour markets than his predecessor. In a pamphlet published by New Europe, the lobby group, next week, Professor Sir James

Ball says: "The need for sweeping deregulation in Europe as a critical factor in obtaining maximum benefit from the single currency remains unrecognised officially at the highest levels."

So the economics of euroland look as alarming as ever, but what about the politics? The past three months have confirmed that the European Commission, unelected and unaccountable, was riddled with bad management and sleaze. The fact that the whole Commission was forced to resign and the fact that Romani Prodi this week took a scheduled flight to London and rode a London taxi rather than a limousine does not necessarily signify an effective clean-up of Europe's civil service. New Europe would warmly welcome recent events if that were the case.

Since the euro was launched, at least one thing has become clearer. The single currency was al-

Horse for a United States of Europe, but at least that is now an openly stated aim.

Newcomers Herr Eichels and Signor Prodi are unashamed federalists. A majority of British peo-ple do not like the idea of a federal Europe and, jodging from conver-sations I have had since New Europe was launched, this opinion has only hardened since January I. However, the new candour at least shows the British people more clearly what they will be vot-ing for if they vote to join the single currency.

Would that Tony Blair and his Government were courageous enough to admit this reality and let the British people have an honest debate about whether this is what it wants or not. If Mr Blair wants to be at the heart of a federal Europe, why doesn't he have the courage of his convictions and say so? He is entitled to his view like the rest of us.

This is the most important question determining the future identity of our nation. Yet the Govern-ment slyly obfuscates the choice to be made and pro-euro voices trivialise the single currency question, telling us, inter alia, that because we eat pasta and enjoy going to Tuscany on boliday, we can safely glide over all the complex and painful realities of life in euroland.

By doing so, they feed suspicion of the grand European project felt by many British sceptics, and amplify calls in some quarters to give up on Europe altogether - and that is not what most of us want. The euro was pushed through in much of Europe without proper discussion, and many ordinary people are already regretting that. Whatever the ultimate outcome. let us do better than this in Britain.

Marketing man's Olympian feat of crisis management

BUSINESS

By Jason Nisse

any people have difficult jobs. difficult jobs.
One would not Like to be a recruitment consultant for Barclays or a spin-doctor for Saddam Hussein. However, few can have had a more difficult time over the past few months than Michael Payne, the marketing director of the International Olympic Committee. The 41-year-old Englishman has had a crash course in crisis management. It started when the Asian economic crisis spilled over into the Australian economy, so bringing the jitters to sponsors, broadcasters and suppliers for the Sydney Games, which take place

Then the IOC had a public puter giant that has been an Olympic sponsor for more than 40 years — over the costs of technology for the Salt Lake City winter Games in 2002. IBM claimed that the IOC wanted too much technology for too little money, while Payne said that IBM's terms would have bankrupted the Sali Lake Games. The result was that IBM's relationship with the IOC "was terminated". That had hardly calmed down when stories began to emerge about gifts being given to IOC by the organising committees of cities wanting to host the Olympics. This led to a chorus of calls for the resignations of a large proportion of the Games' governing body, including the President, Juan Anionio Samaranch.

Last month the IOC acted to defuse the crisis. Ten committee members were either fired or resigned; an ethics committee was set up with independent members including Javier Perez de Cuellar, the former UN Secretary-General, and

Worthy of a medal: Michael Payne, the IOC's marketing director, has been dogged by problems at almost every turn

Howard Baker, the former White House chief of staff; the 1OC decided it would issue aua multibillion-dollar organisation; and a reform commission called IOC 2000 and boasting such luminaries as Henry Kissinger and Peter Ueberroth, who ran the Los Angeles games in 1984, was formed.

And just as the dust settles and Payne sets out from his office in Lucerne to sell the IOC's plan to the most difficult audience of all - the business community which has invested around £10 billion in the Olympics over the past two decades - he faces the rug being pulled from underneath him. A US Senator, John McCain, has proposed a motion in that the IOC's tax-exempt status be withdrawn. should McCain has argued that the endemic corruption of the IOC, if not reformed, makes it unworthy of the tax advantages it enjoys. Taking away the IOC's tax-exempt status could increase the costs of sponsoring the Olympics by 40 per cent — no doubt making many organisations think again.

The motion is being debated today and though Payne claims be is confident that the US Senate will reject McCain's the matter. "Of our 11 partners the core sponsors of the Olympics, who pay a minimum of £30 million each games for the honour), nine are US based." says Payne. "If the Senate created this tax situation, it would pet US corporations at a disadvantage to European or Japanese companies. I don't think this would be popular in the salesman called David D'Alessandro. D'Alessandro is the president and chief executive officer of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, one of the US's largest financial groups and an IOC partner. He is also a vocal critic of what has been going on at the IOC, calling for President Samaranch's resig-nation and that of Phil Coles, a member of both the IOC and Sydney games who admitted that his ex-wife had received jewellery from people associated with Athens' unsuccessful bid for the 1996 Games. (Both are still in office.)

While other sponsors have either been silent or - in the case of Kodak, at least - supportive the IOC's reforms, Mr D'Alessandro has taken the Olympic rings off John Hancock's advertising and literature and has threatened to hold back payments, arguing that corporate sponsors would be tainted by association with an organisation that did not have dean hand. "They lied to us." Mr D'Alessandro said in an interview late last month. "They told us the scandal would be put behind us. But their version of the reform doesn't appear to be anybody else's." Payne does not want to be caught in a slanging match with one of his sponsors, but he indicates that D'Alessandro may be grandstanding, while taking a less abrasive line behind the scenes. "No sponsor has withdrawn and no sponsor has asked to renegotiate its terms," Payne asserts. "We volved in sponsoring the Olympics in one form or another. Only one company out of those 40 has chosen to speak out."

Indeed, in the midst of all this uproar. Payne has been able to sign a series of new sponsorship deals. The first was with Sema, the Anglo-French group which took over at least part of IBM's role as technology partner. Another technology partner - ru-moured to be Sun Microsystems - is due to be announced in the next few weeks, which would leave one vacancy, as the IBM role has been split into three to make the task more manageable.

Coca-Cola and Time Warner have both signed on as partners for another four years, and Payne claims he is close to announce deal with four more partners. Kodak and UPS are almost certain to resign and with most sponsorship experts certain John Hancock will walk away, the key will be whether Visa International and McDonalds continue their association with the Olympics. Payne admits that the Sydney Games is about £100 million short of its sponsorship target, and given that the games are only 15 months away this shortfall is now unlikely to be made up. However, Payne says the target was

ian government twice after Sydney met previous targets. The total amount raised from sponsorship and broad-casting, but before ticket sales, is running at around A$2 billion (about £800 million) for Sydney," says Payne, "This is close to what was raised with ticket sales for Atlanta." s for the Salt Lake City winter Games in 2002, again there is a shortfall running into hundreds of millions of dollars - and again Payne says it not the IOC's fault. He points out that US$500 million (about £315 million) has been raised in sponsorship and US$750 million in broadcast income - double the amount for the last winter Games at Nagano. "Where are they spending the money?" he asks. much of it has gone back to IOC members in "gifts". Both the Sydney and Salt Lake City Games have been tarnished because of the background to how the cities secured the Olympics. However Payne argues that previous Olympics suffered worse problems - such as doping scandals, terrorist attacks and boycotts - yet were successful. "If the games are good, most of this will be forgotten," he daims, perhaps more in hope than expectation.

BUSINESS LETTERS

Firms with rates problems need to take prompt action

From Mr Bruce Jones

Sir, I feel it necessary to write to correct a wrong impression that might have been drawn by your readers from the article which appeared on April 6 un-der the headline "Companies urged to appeal against rates".

The article seems to suggest that there is something inherently wrong with the majority of rating assessments and that firms should therefore appeal against them. I have no means of checking the figures quoted by Fletcher King in respect of appeals that they have been involved in. I can, however, tell you that reductions in total rateable value as a result of settled appeals amount to considerably less than half of the 17 per cent quoted.

If firms are concerned to do something to get their rates bill right, the current review being undertaken of rateable values to take effect from 2000 provides an opportunity for ratepayers to avoid the appeal process altogether. What they need to do is to make sure that we at the Valuation Office have any relevant information about their rents now rather than waiting until the new rating lists come into force on April 1, 2000. Ratepayers should respond to requests for information promptly and carefully, and if they are in any doubt as to what is required the local valuation officer, whose telephone number appears on all correspondence, will be pleased to help. It is in everyone's interests to make sure that the new rating assessments are right first time.

Yours faithfully BRUCE JONES. Director Business Development, Valuation Office Agency. New Court, Carey Street, London, WC2A 2JE.

Pep deadlines should be reviewed

From Mr Barry Tuckwood Sir. Despite allowing ample time for delivery, I in common with thousands of others, have had contributions to personal equity plans returned because of delivery delays combined with the ruling of the Inland Revenue that Pep providers ters as evidence of the date of sending. Overall the delay and this ruling must have prevented the investment of milbons of pounds. This was not, surely, the intention of the (then) Chancellor when the rules on Peps were developed. The current Chancellor should review this situation as a matter of extreme urgency. Yours faithf

So that's all right — it's still tax free, then! Yours faithfully. JOHN DEAS,

Scapa sells division for £329m in revamp

By Paul Armstrong

SCAPA GROUP, the manufacturer of industrial products. vesterday unveiled a comprehensive restructuring involving the £329 million sale of its core paper businesses and plans to off-load a second

The moves will enable 5capa to focus solely on its technical tape operations, for which it says that growth pros-pects are far brighter than those for its operations in the hard-hit paper industry.

Announcing the sale, Scapa said that the performance of its paper division, which generates more than half the company's profit, would have continued to deteriorate under its ownership.

The company expects the sale to fund a special dividend of 50p a share after eliminating the company's remaining debt of £130 million.

David Dunn, chief executive, said that Scapa also planned to sell its speciality materials division within a lew months, possibly leading to a second return to its shareholders.

Mr Dunn said that the tapes businesses were generating a return on capital of about 30 per cent, compared with 15 per cent for the paper divison. Scapa's paper division, which makes paper clothing for specialist industries and services the rolls in paper machines, was responsible for the company's initial develop-

However, Mr Dunn said that the industry was suffering from excess capacity and needed to follow the pattern of consolidation adopted by its customers in the paper and packaging industry.

He said that Voith, the family-owned German paper company that is buying the businesses, was better placed to cope with the challenges facing the industry.
This is a mature business.

RUGBY ESTATES, the property manager and investor which has more than a third of its portfolio in London's Covent Garden, said the property market, especially in the capital, is at last showing signs of stability. The company chaired by David Tye, above left with Andrew Wilson, his chief executive, reported a more than doubling in pre-tax profits to £8.2 million, thanks largely to joint venture disposals during the year. For the 12 months to January 31 earnings per share came in at 30.7p (13.8p) and the com-pany is paying total dividends for the year of 2.9lp, a rise of 10 per cent. The net asset value rose 11 per cent to 211p per share. The share price, however, fell 8½p to 176½p.

Peter Black able to walk tall after 15% profits rise

By MATTHEW BARBOUR

PETER BLACK, the maker of yesterday proved itself to be one of the few suppliers currently benefiting from close ties with Marks & Spencer after unveiling a 15 per cent rise in full-year profits.

The group, which specifically supplies shoes and accesso-ries to M&S, also said that it expects trade with the retailing giant to increase over the com-ing year. A number of clothing suppliers to M&S, which issued a profits warning after a disastrous autumn, have an nounced job cuts. Peter Black, however, provides products in which M&S has only a 10 per cent market share, as opposed to clothing, where M&S has a share of up to 35 per cent.

Stephen Lister, chief executive, said: "We sell 45 per cent of our products to M&S, a figure we hope will grow. They can't and won't give more space to clothing and so we're in a totally different position to the textile people."

For the year to January 31, the group reported pre-tax profits of £21.8 million (£16.2 million) on sales up 13 per cent at £196 million.

Mr Lister said that as well as diversifying away from producing slippers and plastic bags, about 60 per cent of production is now sourced from outside the UK, with factories in India, Italy and Thailand.

Black's figures were also lift-ed by the inclusion of Ferrosan UK, a maker of herbal remedies, which contributed £18.5 million of sales. With interest cover of ten times and low gearing, Mr Lister said the group is on the lookout for further acquisitional growth opportunities.

On adjusted earnings per share of 23.6p (21.4p) there is a final dividend of 3.25p, raising the full-year dividend 10 per cent on a pro-rata basis.

BUSINESS ROTHOTE

Severn Trent calls for price increases

SEVERN TRENT has proposed a 5 per cent cut in water bills next year, but said that prices would have to rise over the following four to pay for the Government's clean-up programme. Severn Trent yesterday said that after an initial £11 off for the average customer, bills would have to rise by 1.5 per cent per annum above inflation from 2001 to 2005 to finance an investment programme of £2.3 billion.

The company, which supplies eight million people in the Midlands and Wales, said improvement work was needed at 65 water treatment plants and for the rehabilitation of 1.200 miles of water main All the water companies are presenting miles of water main. All the water companies are presenting business plans to Ofwat, which is due to respond by July, with a final decision on prices and funding by November.

Torday revives payout

LONG-SUFFERING shareholders in Torday & Carlisle are to receive their first dividend in seven years as the reconstituted company said it would be making a payout of 0.5p for the year. Torday, formerly an engineer, now sees itself as strategic industrial investment company — last year it raised 66 million in the market to finance small acquisitions and the taking of small stakes in undervalued businesses. The company made pre-tax profits of £1.34 million (£1.37 million) in 1998.

Mulberry warning

SHARES of Mulberry, the AlM-quoted luxury goods group, crashed further yesterday as it said that losses were likely to be worse than expected and that there will be no dividend. The company said: "Export sales in the last quarter have been materially below expectations with difficult trading conditions in Europe and the Far East." Analysts believe that losses for the year are likely to come in at £2.2 million. The shares fell 8p to 261/2p, off from a high two years ago of 214p.

Cirqual still upbeat

CIRQUAL, the aerospace, telecoms and building engineer, struck an upbeat note yesterday despite reporting a 20 per cent downturn in pre-tax profits to £4 million at the interim stage. Tony Gardand, chairman, said: "While there have been selective price pressures, continuing improvements in efficiencies have reduced the overall impact." The company is paying an unchanged interim dividend for the six months to March 7 of 4.lp on earnings per share of 9.88p (12.01p).

P&O property sell-off

P&O, the company that recently said it is to concentrate on its shipping interests, yesterday reported that it had sold some US property assets for £53.9 million. The company said it had sold Lenox Park, an urban business park consisting of three office blocks plus land in Atlanta, Georgia, to BellSouth. P&O said the price was above the book value of the assets in the company's accounts. P&O sold other Atlanta property investments last year when it unwound its joint venture with Chelsfield.

Pressac aims for takeovers

By Robert Cole, City correspondent

PRESSAC, the telecoms equipment and automotive parts supplier, aims to make acquisitions to extend strong growth. The company last year paid £62 million for G Cartier, a French auto-components maker, and held a rights issue to fund the deal. Huw Lewis, finance director, indicated, however, that Pressac was unlikely to seek to raise further equity finance to fund any deal. He said that interest rates are low enough to make debt a better source of finance. At January 31. Pressac had debts equivalent to 82 per cent of net assets. However, the group said that gearing was at a peak. Mr Lewis added: "We have quite a bit of capacity in our balance sheet for debt."

about £30 million would interest the group, but emphasised that there was no immediate prospect of sealing an deal.

The re-affirmation of Pressac's expansionist aims came as the company reported a rise in profits in its six months to January 31. Pre-tax profits were £5 million, up from £4.5 million, but Pressac incurred £1.7 million of exceptional charges in the period. Underlying operating profits were 50 per cent up, at £6.7 million. Most of the growth was attributed to the new contribution from G Cartier.

Earnings per share, including the exceptional cost, fell from 4.36p to 3.64p. The interim dividend is 1.14p (1.06p adjusted for the rights issue).

Cannons shares shoot up

CANNONS GROUP, the fastclub operator formerly known as Vardon, saw its shares gain 81/2p to 197p on the back of an upbeat trading statement (Dominic Walsh writes).

At its annual meeting yesterday. Nick Irens, chairman, said that membership had riscn 15 per cent to 82,000 in the three months to March 31, with growth coming both from existing and new clubs. He added: "The market for health and fitness continues to grow and the future for the group is exciting."

The sale of its attractions

business, including the London Dungeon, has left the group cash positive and it is planning to invest £115 million over the next three years. Six clubs are scheduled to open in 1999 with another five in the pipeline for 2000.

US recovery helps Smurfit

By Paul Armstrong

SHARES of Jefferson Smurfit Group jumped nearly 13 per cent yesterday after the international packaging company unveiled a better than expected profit result and said that the US market would continue to drive a price recovery.

Smurfit reported pre-tax profits up 14 per cent last year to Ir£171 million (£145 million) on the back of a 12 per cent lift in sales to Ir£2.9 billion.

The strong result, and the prospect of further improvement, is some of the brightest news to emanate from the embattled paper and packaging industry over the past year.

Excess capacity in most mar-kets has combined with the Asian economic crisis to squeeze margins as manufacturers compete for business. However, Smurfit said yesterday that the US market should record a drop in net capacity this year and growth in global capacity would remain at, or below, 1.4 per cent.

The company said that the increasing strength of the mar-ket was highlighted by the price rises that were implemented in the US in February, which is considered a soft

Analysts said that the outlook for Smurfit's share price was encouraging. "We have had a fairly positive trading statement for the first time in a long time and I think the stock will probably move ahead in the coming weeks," one analyst said. The shares closed 16p higher at 142p.

Barclay brothers set to sell Howard

London's Howard hotel, which is expected to fetch £38 million

By DOMINIC WALSH

THE Barclay brothers, whose interests include the Ritz hotel and The Scotsman newspaper, are poised to sell the Howard hotel in London to a US real estate investment trust (REII) for £38 million.

The prospective purchaser is believed to be MeriStar, a so-called "paper-clipped" REIT that is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. It was created last year through the merger of American General Hospitality and CapStar Hotel Company. focusing exclusively on the hotel industry.

Speculation over the future of the 153-room Howard has swirled since the reclusive Barclay twins acquired the Ritz in 1995 for £75 million. The brothers are understood to have been canvassing interest for almost two years, although it is only recently that a deal has appeared likely.

Millennium & Copthorne Hotels is one of several groups to have expressed an interest in recent months. At its recent results, M&C admitted that it had been keen to acquire the four-star property but said that it had been put off by the

A spokeswoman for Meri-Star said last night: "We are looking at a number of deals in London and elsewhere but we have nothing to announce." She admitted that the Howard was the type of hotel MeriStar might be interested in. However, she said that it was more interested in securing management contracts, possibly with a small equity investment, rather than outright acquisitions. MeriStar is effectively two

The steelworks that polluted the Victoria site in Ebbw Vale

omeowners with properties built on contaminated land could find themselves liable for the cost of cleaning up the pollution under rules to be introduced later this year. The work may involve replacing the garden topsoil, or, in the worst cases of industrial pollution, treating the land with chemicals. Both options could involve considerable expense for owners who do not have insurance cover.

The rules, to be announced by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions in July, are the latest attempt by the Government to clear up ambiguities about

The rules will say that if the original polluter — be it a steelworks or chemical factory — no longer exists or cannot pay, the developer of the land is liable. But if local councils cannot make the developer pay, the homeowner must pick up the tab.

An official from the Department of the Environment did not know how many homeowners would be affected, but said: "Councils will make a distinction between those who bought their property at a discount because they knew the land was contaminated, and those who bought in good faith. However, there may be cases of homeowners

Land experts predict fierce legal battles between the Government and the original land polluters so that homebuyers do not end up with the bill. Developers, such as Berkeley Homes, say that any clean-up costs will be reflected in higher prices for new housing.

welcomes the changes. "It could be that the situation will improve because there will be a hierarchy of responsibility," he says, "But many of the original polluters have gone, so there is a risk for some people." Laws about contaminated land were introduced only in the 1995 En-vironment Act. The Environment

he Department of the Environment says that the changes will protect homeowners more by putting big companies first in line to pay. But the Local Government Association, which promotes the interests of local authorities, is worried.

A spokesman says: "Changes to the Environment Act are long over-due and local authorities have an important environmental protection job to do. But with the new regulations it is very likely that legal disputes could bring work to a halt

Not all homeowners will be insured against the costs of cleaning up land. But from this month, buy-ers of new properties on brownfield sites — those most at risk — will be protected by the National House Building Council. Houses registered for its Buildmark Cover after April I will be entitled to claim the costs of cleaning up land or, if this is uneconomic, of being bought out.

THE HOMEOWNERS

HOMEOWNERS threatened with the possible costs of clearing up contamination are furious and say that the Government should, in the last resort, have to pay,

Before the 1.300-home project could go ahead, the ground had to be raised by two metres, contaminated timber ponds drained and refilled, and gas membranes in-stalled. Work by Belway Urban Renewal on the £17 million project will finish next year. Mr McNichol paid £90,000 for his four-bedroom house in the early Nineties: it is now worth £100,000. He is happy with Belway's development and is confident that it is safe, But if further contamination comes to light, he says, it may be impossible to call to account many of the timber firms responsible because most probably no longer exist. "It should be the problem of the landowner and developer," he says. "If we had to pay, I would find it hard to square with the Government trying to en-courage brownfields. And any risk should have been reflected in the

MICHAEL and Kay Twohig are also fearful of the changes. They live in Ebbw Vale, in a three-bedroom detached house on the Victoria development. They and their sons, aged two and seven, moved in ten months ago, paying £67,000. The site, a former steelworks.

has been cleaned of heavy metals only in the areas where the 190 Redrow homes are being built because larger-scale land clean-up would have been uneconomic.

Mrs Twohig says: "It was horrif-ic here before, with slagheaps and the remains of works. But now living here is lovely and clean. It has been a dramatic change. But if we found we had to pay for work still to do, and with the polluters long gone, we would feel a sense of in-justice. We paid the market price."

A COUNTRY mansion that has provided the setting for television programmes and films including The English Patient has been converted to Il luxury flats. Wyfold Court, about six miles from Henleyon-Thames in Oxfordshire. was built in 1872 and designed by George Somers Clarke, a pupil of Sir George Barry, the architect of the Palace of Westminster. Among its attractions is a 430 sq ft stained-glass window that has taken nine months to restore. One flat has been sold by FPD Savills: two others have been reserved. Prices range from £700,000 to £1.5 million.

■ No 1 Cambridge Gate in Regent's Park has dropped in price by about £5 million since it went on the market last October for £15 million. The house has eight bedroom suites, six reception rooms, three kitchens, a library, study and a wine cellar, its restoration is the culmination of a programme started by the Crown Estate 50 years ago to restore the war-damaged Nash terrac-es and villas of Regent's Park. De Groot Collis are selling the house for £9.75 million.

■ THE wartime home of Clark Gable is for sale in the village of Polebrook, near Oundle, Northamptonshire. He lived in The Gables, which is named after him, while serving at RAF Polebrook in the Second World War. The fivebedroom house dates back to the 17th century and is a Grade II listed building. For sale at £400.000 through Carter Jonas's Peterborough office, it has some original features, including inglenook fireplaces, omber framing and oak casement windows.

A l6th-century manor once home to Sir Walter Raleigh is for sale at £285,000. The Grade II listed Manor House. at Modbury in Devon, was the home of Katherine Champernowne, who married Walter Raleigh of Fardel, Sir Walter's father. The house, being sold through Marchand Petit, has an adjoining two-bedroom cottage and a coach house.

In determining whether a costs order should be made against a nonparty pursuant to section 51 of the Supreme Court 1981, the test was whether in all the circumstances it was just to exercise the power.

While it would be unjust in the vast majority of cases to make such an order, it was not a pre-condition of the exercise of the power that the circumstance: were exceptional.

The Court of Appeal so held in a reserved judgment, dismissing an appeal by solicitors. Miller Gardner, against the order of Mr Justice Parker, sitting as Vice-Chancellor in Manchester on June 6, 1997, that Miller Gardner, who were soliciiors for defendants, should pay the plaintiffs' costs on an indemnity basis in respect of two successful actions against Globe Legal Services Ltd. LORD JUSTICE MORRITT said that the jurisdiction to award costs against a non-party was conferred by section 51(1) and (3) of the Supreme Court Act 1981: see Aiden Shipping Co Ltd v Interbulk Ltd ([1986] AC 965).

Counsel for Miller Gardner, basing himself on Symphony Group plc v Hodgson ([1994] QB 179, 192-193), submitted that the facts did not bring it within the category of exceptional so as to entitle the court to make the orders.

There appeared to be a danger of treating the requirement that the circumstances were exceptional as being part of the statute. It was not. The epithet originated in Hodgson case, but was based on what Lord Goff of Chieveley said in Aiden Shipping (at p980F):

"In the vast majority of cases, it would no doubt be unjust to make an award of costs against a person who is not a party to the relevant ways so."

Ultimately the test was whether in all the circumstances it was just to exercise the power conferred by the Act to make a non-party pay he costs of the proceedings.

Plainly, in the ordinary run of cases where the party was pursuing or defending the claim for his own benefit through solicitors acting as such, there was not usually any justification for making someone else pay the costs.

But there would be cases where either or both those two features were absent. In such cases it would be a matter for judgment and the exercise by the judge of his discretion to decide whether the circumstances relied on were such as to make it just to order a non-party to

> LORD JUSTICE PETER GIB-SON said Mr Goodman, was a so-licitor who had practised as a sole practitioner under the style Bowl-ing & Co. Mr Raja and four other ployees, had become purtners in Bowling & Co without taking over the accumulated debts of the sole practice.

The Inland Revenue having peti-tioned for Mr Goodman's bankruptcy, he had entered into an individual voluntary arrangement with his creditors in January 1992. The agreement contained no power for it to be amended.

Under It, Mr Raja had waived any entitlement to a dividend on a debt of £63,000 owed him by Mr Goodman. Mr Goodman's pariners were to make ex grada contributions to the creditors.

in March 1996 all the creditors save Mr Raia had accepted an offer from Mr Goodman. Mr Raja had applied for directions under section 263(3) of the Insolvency Act 1986, claiming that any variation to the arrangement should be approved by all the creditors.

The judge could see no reason why all the creditors entitled to share in the proceeds of the assets brought into an individual voluntary arrangement should not agree to vary their rights, despite the abence of an express power to vary the arrangement

It was not in dispute that the

In the absence of such a power. A creditor who had waived his right to a dividend under an indiany variation could not, in his Lordship's judgment, have effect as if it vidual voluntary arrangement were made as a part of the original with a debtor could not oppose a individual voluntary arrangement subsequent agreement between the debior and other creditors to vary having statutory force.

But the statutory provisions did not compel the conclusion that in was not possible for those interested in a provision of an individual voluntary arrangement to agree a variation of that provision when no one else was affected adversely or There was no sensible reason why those whose interests were affected should not be free to agree an alteration to their rights and liabilities, though if a person's interest was adversely affected he could properly seek the intervention of the court under section 263(3). In his Lordship's judgment, that position was no different from that obtaining under the general law where there was a multilateral contract. It was always open to some of the parties agree a variation of their rights as between themselves if they could do so without affecting the rights of the other parties. The consensual variations only when invited to consider what order or other direction to make need not shut its eyes to the fact of the relevant consensual variation. Mr Raja's waiver had benefited the other creditors and had been made expressly conditional on ac-ceptance of the individual volun-

had force in contract. But the court

But his Lordship did not accept that a condition was to be implied that those interested in the arrangement could not between themselves agree a variation. That impli-cation could not satisfy any test of necessity. If Mr Raja had wished to make his waiver subject to further conditions he could have done so. but he had not.

As a creditor unhappy with the way the supervisor was approaching Mr Goodman's proposed variation to the individual voluntary arrangement, Mr Raja was within the categories of persons who could apply to the court under section 262(3).

The judge had been wrong to award costs on an indemnity basis against Mr Raja who had not aced improperly in availing himself of the opportunity presented by the Act to apply to the court. Costs should be on the standard basis. Lord Justice Clarke delivered a

To do otherwise would involve the court in virtually a full assessment of the case, including the criteria set out in section 14 of the 1976 Act, at the leave stage.

"Prima facie evidence" meant evidence which, if not balanced or outweighed by any other evidence, would suffice to establish a particu-

One result of the prima facie evidence test was that evidence from a respondent, however interest was unlikely to be helpful at the leave stage.

In 1970, the court had concluded that the removal of resale price maintenance from proprietary medicines would result in more chemists going out of business more quickly, reducing the number of outlets for both prescribed and proprietary medicines; further, that there would be a substandal loss of outlets for less frequently demanded proprietary medicines, all to the detriment of the public see In re Medicaments

Evidence in support of the Director-General's application was largely to be found in Material Changes in the Medicaments Marker since 1970 published by the Of-fice of Fair Trading in January 1998, which identified eight princi-

The court was obliged to consider them both individually and collectively, as two or more changes might become material if, taken to gether, they could affect the bal-ance of detriment, albeit that one alone might not. There was enough prima facie evidence of material changes for it to be in the public interest for the court to revisit the matter.

OPERA: Glyndebourne's new general director, Nicholas Snowman, has radical plans, as he tells Richard Morrison

Fasten your cummerbunds

f you believe Sir George Christie — and after all, it is his home - the image of Glyndebourne as a picture-postcard pile where corporate fatcats guzzle champagne and then snooze through operas is a wild invention of the tabloid press that is mysteriously repeated by nearly everyone else.

.2 TOO PRIVATE

Someone said to me the other day: 'If you removed the gardens and the picnic thing, you wouldn't be doing more than 50 per cent busi-ness'," he sniffs. "I did think the re-mark was churlish. Artistically, the festival is very serious. Our repertoire is highly adventurous, considering that we are unsubsidised. And our corporate supporters, who are always slagged off first, are the ones who buy most of the tickets for the most challenging repertoire."

Well, their thirst for musical exotica will surely be satisfied now. Nicholas Snowman has arrived, and if any English music administrator qualifies for the epithet "radical chic" it is Glyndebourne's new general director. Founder of Britain's top new-music ensemble, the London Sinfonietta; devout Pierre Boulez acolyte: champion of "themed festivals" and other mind-expanding iamborees as boss of the South Bank Centre in London ... Snow-man is unlikely to let Glyndebourne's pearls-and-Pimm's atmosphere deter him from his zealous mission to promote the new and the esoteric. "The classical music world generally is afflicted by museum culture," he says. "In opera that shows itself in the fixation on certain singers. That irritates and worries me, and I think Glyndebourne can do something about it."

So fasten your cummerbund. Corporate Man, you're in for a bumpy ride. Of course Glyndebourne has premiered several tough new works in recent years. And as Snowman points out, he inherits a newly commissioned Harrison Birtwistle opera from his predecessor, Anthony Whitworth-Jones. Called The Last Supper, it will take a "sophisticated, millennial look at Christianity", Snowman says. Indeed, it has already excited theological curiosity by increasing the number of those present at the Last Supper to 14. "As well as Christ and the Disciples there's a ghost, represenong our generation." Snowman explains. The work goes on the

Nicholas Snowman in the gardens at Glyndebourne: his adventurous repertoire plans for the next ten years have been greeted with "total support" by Sir George Christie and the Glyndebourne board, he says

front. Snowman also intends to revive the master's vast electronic opera. The Mask of Orpheus. "I have a thing about it," he says. Won't it eat up massive amounts of rehearsal time and budget? "That's what we are here for," he replies.

This is just the start of Snowman's shock-of-the-new assault on the Sussex Downs. He has commissioned the clever young English composer Thomas Ades to write a new opera for Glyndebourne in 2003. He considered it "obvious" to grab the British premiere of What Next?, a new mini-opera by Elliott Carter, veteran American composer of some of the 20th century's knottiest scores. And another uncompromising modernist, Peter Entyos, has been co-commissioned by Glyndebourne and the Châtelet

Glyndebourne tour next year and in Paris to write an opera on Tony 'deep structure' - the real drama with lighter voices actually singing era each season to the period-instru-Kushner's Angels in America.

Snowman says that he has received total support from Christie and Glyndebourne's board. "I have had complete liberty to go berserk. Last month the board approved my programme for the years 2001 to 2005, budgets included. I have also mapped out 2006 to 2010. They have said ves to the contemporary repertoire and everything else."

"Everything else" is scarcely less jolly. Glyndebourne will assemble a cycle of Monteverdi's three extant operas using period instruments, and embark-on a "German Romantic" project, involving several 19thcentury operas hitherto thought unredeemable. My arrogant hope is that we will at last prove that We-ber's Euryanthe and Oberon and Schumann's Genoveva are stageworthy," Snowman says. "To be pretendous, we want to reveal their

Even the stoutest Glyndebourne supporter, one suspects, may oeed to pack an extra bottle of fine Chablis into the hamper to cope with that lot Snowman's German Romantic project is planned to lead to one thunderous summer of nothing except deeply meaningful Teutonic blockbusters, including Tristan and Wazzeck. "That's pencilled in for post-2005 and may prove impractical," he concedes.

esides Tristan, he also plans an Otello. Both would be conducted by the mesmeric Valery Gergiev. Even so, isn't this taking Glyndebourne into epic Wagner and Verdi regions that are best left to bigger theatres? "But our Otello will be intimate, and our Tristan will be done as Wagner wanted, the lines," Snowman argues.

Snowman has hooked Simon Rattle to return in 2003 for Idomeneo (with Peter Sellars directing), and is negotiating with the glamorous maestro of Los Angeles. Esa-Pekka Salonen, to make his Glyndebourne debut. Mark Elder and David Atherton also feature in his plans. So what about the choice of music director to replace Andrew Davis, who leaves next year? "At the moment we are talking to many people, some of whom I have already named," Snowman says.
"And I'm hoping that Yakov Kreizberg will also return here to conduct." But Snowman decided "pretty quickly" to dispense with the posidon of director of productions (currently Graham Vick).

Another change will involve the resident orchestras: the London Philharmonic will lose another opment Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment. The LPO has been very understanding," Snowman purts. A new "international concert series" will begin in the opera house this Sunday with a piano recital by Mitsuko Uchida. And there are big changes in store for Glyndebourne Touring, the one part of the operation that receives Arts Council subsidy — though far less than it should, according to Snowman.

"I was outraged to find that we were getting a subsidy of El6 per audience member to tour, while Opera North and Welsh National Opera get more than E40. So we are negotiating to remedy that. We are also cutting costs for the 1999 tour, and reconstituting the touring repertoire to include more old favourites. The tour is haemorrhaging money that we need to make the festival programme exciting."

And exciting the Snowman years promise to be. Of course, as Chrisde points out, Glyndebourne has always pioneered new and neglected repertoire. "I think of Mozart before the war, then the Rossini comedies. Raymond Leppard's revival of Baroque opera, the Janacek cycle our record speaks for itself."

Indeed it does. But with Christie (who turns 65 on December 31) passing the chairmanship of the family business to his son Gus on the first dawn of the new millennium, there is a distinct end-of-era aura around the old place now. "ti will be a staggered handover," Christie promises. "I want the audience to feel comfortable with our future plans." Will they? ft will be quite a test of Corporate Man's taste for adventure.

A joyful noise unto the Lord

pple? Serpent? No sign of these in Haydn's Garden of Eden. All is famously blithe and bonny in The Creation, Haydn's version of the biblical story; and it did not take long in Roger Norrington's punchy performance with the London Philharmonic for the proper spell of wonder to be cast. Chaos reigned eerily with drifting chromatic lines and lurching crescendos: the Creator switched on the light with that mega-watt C major blast, then, before we knew it, the 100-strong London Philharmonic Choir was touching the soul, in rapt praise of God's "new-created world".

There are hits and misses in the English words to Haydn's oratorio. "Despairing" seems weak recompense for the German verzweiflung. Yet the sheer directness of the English phrasing can lead us straight to the work's heart. "This world so great, so wonderful," Adam duets tenderly with Eve in the Garden of Eden. If only it were possible 200 years later to write music of such innocence, such certainty.

Norrington himself did everything possible to bring the humanist message home. driving the LPO's modern instruments according to period practice, highlighting their instrumental colours, floating the "secco" recitatives on the hard sound of a fortepiano. He encouraged us to applaud at going to have a good ome. Bass-baritone David Wilson-Johnson certainly did: he communicated directly as the archangel Raphael, making the most of the descriptive passages about flaky snow, finny tribes, flexible tigers and the creeping worm.

John Mark Ainsley's Uriel took longer to impress. But his tenor voice woke up once God invented the Sun and Moon awesome sights rewarded by beautiful, clear enunciation. Fellow archangel Gabriel also sounded clear as a bell. Indisposition robbed us of Donna Brown, but Nancy Argenta was a fine alternative, shaping lines with sensitivity. And she alone made a virtue of the second interval, changing into a light green dress as large as a tree, billing and cooing as Eve with Wilson-Johnson's Adam.

Above, heyond and behind was the choir. They were splendidly vigorous, never swamped by the orchestra. Praise be to them and chorus master Neville Creed. And praise be to Norrington, who lived through the music, flinging his baton into the sky, flexing his knees and jiggling shoulders whenever the excitement got too much.

Outstand-in from the Violin Concerto No I in B flat, K207, which is a com-paratively weak work and which needs the most persuasive advocacy if it is to make any positive impression. Daniel . Hope, a young violinist more developed in technique than personality, would have been well advised to avoid it. His performance of the concerto was not lacking in style but. accomplished though it was, it would have been far more interesting if something in the material of the score had pro-oked a spontaneous reaction. Alexander Anissimov, the replacement conductor, surely will come back to Liverpool in the near future. A pupil of (among others) Rozhdestvensky himself, he has a similarly fluent, if less eccentric, technique and he has authority. He also knows his Shostakovich. His interpretation of the Eighth Symphony was so natu-rally paced and so clear in its expressive intendions that there was scarcely one instance of doubt in an orchestral performance of sustained brilliance and emotional commitment. If he failed to fit every episode of the work into a coherent structural strategy, he certainly did not underestimate its drama@c content and he was no less effective in securing the intimate atmosphere proper to such contempladve moments as the cor anglais solo in the first movement or the magical entry of the horn in the fourth.

Are they really a trio? They have played chamber music together since they were eight: their mother is a clarinettist, their father a violinplaying solicitor. Now they play together in concerts, and also follow solo careers.

And recitals? "We're not brilliantly matched from the point of view of repertoire. But we do make arrangements for oboe, cello and violin of Baroque pieces by composers like Quantz and Corelli, and intersperse them with duets. And we've commissioned a work specially for us from the young composer Christopher Wiggins."

Are they rivals in competitions? "We have entered cornpetitions against each other, yes; but that helps rather than hinders! We're all really supporting each other." In 1992 Rebecca reached the woodwind finals of the Young Musician of the Year, and in 1996 Helena and Katharine also made it to the national finals.

Where are they now? Rebecca is freelancing after studying at the Royal Academy, the Hong Kong Academy for Performing Arts and the Guildhall School, She also plays in her own wind quin-

A bit too much excitement

There are omes when young Freddy Kempi seems the very embodiment of the Florestan/Eusebius dual personality which Schumann set up for himself: on the one hand, the passionate extrovert; on the other, the shy dreamer. In the six years since his being awarded BBC Young Musician of the Year, Kempf has made his mark with both the fearless strength and stamina of his playing, and the cultivated tone and intense listening of its reflective

No wonder, then, that he has focused on Schumann's Carnaval to lead his forthcoming debut recording; and that he chose it as the centrepiece of his sold-out recital on Sunday. And he can perhaps be forgiven for emphasising the polarity of the Florestan and Eusebius personalities: at times it seemed as if there wasn't much in between. Pierrot and Arlequin, Pantalon and Columbine were mawkish characters in the violence of their dynamic contrasts.

Kempf clearly took the name of the work at face value. This was a real carnival: at times vulgar, often intoxicated, and frequented as much by the Lord of Misrule as by its commedia dell'arte characters. Kempf is just 21 and he will, I hope, eventually look longer and deeper into the piece: at the moment his sheer excilement in it is palpable and dominant, and the work can surely take it. Rachmaninov, though, cannot. He, too, wrote with both passionate ardour and deep inner melancholy. But the temperament and idiom are totally different, and Kempf made us insufficiently aware of the fact. He played the earlier. longer 1913 version of the Sonata No 2 in B flat minor, and his technique and extraordinary stamina were certainly up to its demands. But it didn't sound like Rachmaninov. Phrases and paragraphs were pushed ahead, rather than being fired by a sense of inner propulsion: and the pealing sonorities so characteristic of the composer tended to be lost in a welter of insufficiently selected and balanced voices.

Kempf was happier in the Beethoven Sonata Op III with which he bravely began the evening. Here his daring, and his excitement with sound in its own right, led to playing which recreated Beethoven's own sense of struggle in the first movement without compromising its structure. And his ease and simplicity in articulating and pacing the Arietta needed only a little more air and a little less pedal to be equally compelling.

f all the painters art in the early 20th century, Vasily Kanlong. With an audacity that still seems courageous, he decided to jettison all references to the world of appearances. Around 1912, Kandinsky embarked on a voyage into an abstract universe. That heroic journey, and the pictorial discoveries he made there, had a profound effect on the future course of Modernism. He was a liberator, and the finest exhibits from that period charge his Royal Academy exhibition of works on paper with an impassioned, surging

a surprisingly long time to arrive at such boldness. In his native Russia, he had studied law and was expected to eniov an outstanding career as an academic teacher. But with a recklessness as vehement as his later pursuit of Abstraction, he rejected legal studies in 1896 and decided to train as an artist in Munich. Already 29, Kandinsky was older than his fellow-students. And for a while he followed a nostalgic course.

The earliest exhibits in the RA show are fuelled by the urge to escape into fairytale fantasy. They resemble illustrations for children's stories. Sometimes he is guilty of an artfulness bordering on whimsy: in a preposterous sketch for a poster advertising a French brewery, a lavishly plumed lady pours beer into a froth-filled glass with risible theatricality. But other images from this difficult, formative period show a greater toughness. One picture in particular, a gouache and crayon work called Night, seems prophetic. At first, the blanched and melancholy maiden combing her undulating tresses in this mysterious scene appears to have strayed from a latterday Pre-Raphaelite painting. In reality, though, she derives from an ancient Russian tale about Baba Jaga, a malevolent witch who extends a crooked blue finger from the right side of the gouache. Kandinsky shows her coaxing a small boy to leave his flaxen-haired sis-ter and wander into the countryside. The moonlit flowers. trees and meadows are reduced to a sequence of simplified, fluently brushed forms. Barely identifiable, they announce the strangeness of the dream-like visions Kandinsky would soon place at the centre of his In 1908, the year after Night was exbecame a ecuted, he became more singleminded in his urge to overhaul the language of Western art. With Gabriele Munter, a young painter he had met during their stumessianic dent days in Mumission 9 spending > Murnau in the Bavarian Alps. The sublime landscape helped to stimulate him, and before long he became a powerful force in the avant-garde groups then galvanising new German art.

By now in his forties, the Russian expatriate seemed an unlikely figurehead for innovaoon and revolt. Impeccably dressed, Kandinsky never lost the air of pedagogy he had ac-quired during his university days. But the work he now produced was the opposite of academic. Like the crusaders who impel their galloping horses forward in his 1903 gouache, he became a man with a meswoodcut called Lyrical. The contours of both man and mount, stripped of all superfluity, have become almost skeletal. Their dynamism reflects the spirit of The Blue Rider, a group dedicated to broadcasting radical initiatives in art through exhibitions and publications. Kandinsky, who had played the cello in his Musco-sive achievement during those vite youth, found enormous stimulus in music. He included Schoenberg's paintings in a Blue Rider show as early as 1911, and both men were heartened by the discovery of their shared concerns. Musical in-fluences helped to convince Kandinsky that art should claim the freedom to detach itself from representing visible appearances. He wanted to go far beyond the surface of things, and acknowledged his debt to music by giving his 1913 book of coloured woodcuts the exclamatory offe Klange (Sounds). The images within this exuberant album can be counted among Kandinsky's most joyful and unfet-

Kandinsky devoted much of his formidable energy to a se-ries of ebullient images each called Improvisation. But some of the watercolours displayed here prove that even the most rapturous of his abstractions were underpinned by intensive preparadon. Study for Composition VII, a seemingly impetuous canvas of 19t3, shows how carefully he planned these eruptive images. The amount of elaborate calculation tying behind Kand-insky's major paintings of the period in no sense dilutes their exhilaration. The greatest oils he produced then are among the high points of 20th-century art, and no London gallery has ever mounted a substantial exhibition of Kandinsky's convuloverwhelming conviction from the Royal Academy's walls. For all Kandinsky's wild mo-dernity, these images derive much of their fervent power from his religious beliefs. His most influential theoretical defence of Abstraction, published in English in 1914, is the

temperament. tn common with other European artists, he became preoccupied with the notion that wholesale renewal would be attained only after equally thoroughgoing destruction. Hence his uncanny ability, in some of these turbulent warecotours, to anticipate the annihilation that engulfed Europe in the latter half of 1914. Kandinsky welcomed the declaration of war at first, regarding it as a necessary purgative. But he was forced to leave Germany, first for Switzerland and then Russia. His art lost its overriding impetus during these years of exile. And the death at the Front of young painter-friends soon persuaded him to deplore the conflict. Some of the images he produced in 1915 and the following year, most notably the fractured Watercolour with Black Lines, reflect a more tragic mood. His marriage to Nina Andreevskaya in 1917 was three darkened years later by the death of their ⁶ His later young son Volo-dya. they regarded Kandinsky as a bourgeois individualist. Their anopathy persuaded Kandinsky to leave Russia for good in 1921 and accept Walter Gropius's invitation to teach at the newly formed Bauhaus. The prospect of progressive art and architecture allying to forge a new society appealed to a painter who had always been fired by the idea of the Gesamthunstweek Gesamtkunstwerk, a grand coming-together of the arts.

To my eyes, though, his work as a teacher had an in-creasingly detrimental effect on the art he produced. Kandinsky recovered his belief in the viability of Abstraction, becoming a prolific thoughtful and inventive exponent of a language freed from the need to represent. But a new emphasis on peatness and geometrical order drains his work of its former dynamism. Heavily reliant on compasses and a rul-er, he retreated from the im-passioned, sensuous impulse dominating his finest prewar work. Kandinsky never suc-cumbed to formula: a 1928 watercolour called Weighing is a new departure, setting circles and rectangles free to float in a ter his earlier risk-taking. There is no sign, in the closing phases of the show, of an artist enjoying a supremely fruitful late phase. He continued to try new ideas, even after settling near Paris for the last decade of his life. But the apparent sprightliness of a work like the t937 Line with Accompaniment cannot disguise its fundamental tidiness and cauoon. Kandinsky's yearning for apocalyptic renewal, which gave his earlier work its rousing ardency, had expired on the battlefields of the First World War. However diligently he tried afterwards, the old sense of adventure could never be fully recovered.

☐ IT IS not for nothing that the catalogue essay for Spink-Leger's latest exhibition is headed "Who was John Tunnard?" Tunnard (1900-71) was in fact quite a figure in his day: he had connections with the English Suprepliets and often this makes a radical difference to an artist's standing and reputation: the fact of belonging wholly to no nationali-ty in particular inhibits both sides from staking claims. Potworowski was born and began his training in Poland Lafe tions with the English Surrealists and, and began his training in Poland, left for Paris in 1924 and studied there under later, the artists who gathered round Ni-cholson and Hepworth in St Ives; he did Leger, and did not return to Poland until one of the most prominent and memora-ble murals in the Festival of Britain. But 1930. When the Germans invaded he ultimately he saw things in his own terms, and never really fitted in with anybody. Hence, like Potworowski, he is impossible to pigeonhole, and still suffers for it, being not so much underesti-In 1958 he moved back to Poland, but Fortunately now we have a major rediscov-ery show, consisting mostly of his later British oils and watercolours. He paints show should do nothing but improve his standing. The works in it date from bestanding. The works in it date from be-tween 1938 and 1969; none of them, odd-ly, from the period which seems particu-larly his, the Fifties. All of his works, in-deed, look at a glance as though they be-long to the Festival of Britain style, all people in landscapes or interiors, with a unique delicacy of colouring, unifying all elements into patterns of subtle harmony. He appears to have been influ-enced a little by Bonnard, on whom he spindly lines, streamlined shapes, and the excitement of television equalled was an expert, but the final effect is totally different. If a painter who fits into no pigeonhole can be tolerated, he thoroughly deserves a second look.

☐ Peter listed was the brother-in-law of Vilhelm Hammershoi. Which to many is probably like confidently announcing "For the Snark was a Boojum, you see". But if you know that Hammershoi was one of the great masters of the second Golden Age of Danish art in the 1900s, specialising in crepuscular interiors humming with a mysterious intersity was though the ous intensity, even though frequently un-peopled, then the connection makes a lot of sense. Ilsted was less mysterious, more human, and, to be honest, not in any way as good. But that is comparing him to a service of the service o him to a great artist, which he never claimed to offer, especially in his mezzoonts. Each print was individually hand coloured, to beautiful, elusive effect. Lumley Cazalet also has some charming oils, but it is the prints that constitute IIsted's most individual contribution. # Hoist by their own bombast

t was a crucial test of public taste and critical forgiveness when the Cranberries played their first full show for more than two years at the Shepherds Bush Empire on Monday. Dormant since their third album, For the Faithful Departed. earned relatively poor sales and merciless reviews in 1996, the Irish foursome who have notched up album sales of nearly 30 million made this low-key concert the first step in their comeback campaign. In the spiralling, hiccuping, piercing yodel of singer and lyricist Dolores O'Riordan. the Cranberries can lay claim to one of the most original and emotive voices in pop. But O'Riordan is also responsible for some of its most monumentally crass lyrics, veering from exquisite to excruciating with alarming regularity. The good news is that this wholesome Limerick quartet have partially rediscovered their melodic, folkish roots on their archly titled new album, Bury the Hatchet. The bad news is that they did not quite manage to incorporate this shift back towards subtlety in the cramped confines of the Empire. A newly blonde O'Riordan seemed to be locked in stadium-rock siren mode for much of the 90-minute set. prowling the stage and punching the sky as she roughly manhandled brittle anthems which deserved far more care and compassion. Admittedly there were moments of beauty amid the bluster, including early airings for the sparkly acoustic gems Ode to My Family and Linger. inese remain O'Kiordan's most personal lyrics, pre-fame compositions which lack the formulaic ring of more recent efforts, and even ber faltering voice could not entirely erase their quiet majesty. At least one number from the new alburn, the tremulous luliaby Saving Grace, tapped into a similar mood of sparse serenity, but otherwise the singer made little emotional connection with an expectant crowd.

The remainder of the set alternated between anodyne new material such as You and Me and Delilah and footstomping, chest-beating tan-trums which gave full rein to the band's least attractive qualities. Nor was there much evidence in either the recent single Promises or the new album track Desperate Andy that the Cranberries have evolved beyond bludgeoning half-tunes and clumsy sloganeering.

The foursome ended this unsatisfying comeback show without reclaiming much ground from their detractors, leaving behind a vague sense opportunity squandered. They may no longer embrace mid-Atlantic stadium-rock banality quite as unequivocally as they did a few years ago, but they also appeared equally uncomfortable with the mellifluous ballads which brought them recognition in the first place. Hence the encore revival of their earliest hit, Dreams, a once elegant shimmer now into something lumpen and uncouth.

Their forthcoming world tour may revive the old spark, but for now the Cranberries seem stranded between the sublime and the ridiculous, milking a limited repertoire of weary vocal tics and increasingly graceless melodies.

t is 20 years, almost to the month, since Echo and the Bunnymen released their first record, ten years since the band split un two years since they reformed. It is a familiar rock story, one that usually ends unhappily in a misalliance of cynicism and nostalgia. But Echo and the Bunnymen seem to have defied convention. Their acclaimed new album, What Are You Going To Do With Your Life?, signals an imaginative change of direction, in which youthful bombast makes way for a bruised vulnerability. Singer Ian McCulloch is even Man of the Month in GQ magazine. Strangely, perhaps, the new record forms only a small part of their current live show. Its gentle tunes are left until a third of the way through. Then Baby Rain, with its soothing melody and piano trills. stands in stark contrast to the guitar-driven rock of the openng numbers, with their debt to the Doors and the Velvet Underground. The set rewards loyal fans with past glories from the Bunnymen catalogue: the wailing guitar of The Cutter, the melodrama of The Killing Moon. Although only McCulloch and guitarist Will Sergeant remain from the original line-up, they are not just recycling the past. The lightshow is a lavish affair. mixing bright flashes, sparkling cascades and soothing swirls. Dry ice billows across

a deep Liverpool accent, between extemporising another verse and mimicking James Brown's Sex Machine. It gave тие репогталсе а tense finale. There was one moment

though, when the cool cracked. It happened when McCulloch sang the title track from the new album. He seemed to be addressing the audience. like a concerned parent pleading with a dissolute teenager, but what made it touching was the realisation that he was asking the question of himself too - and that he doesn't know the answer.

They may not have achieved the pinnacles of their contemporaries (they were once bracketed with U2), but Echo and the Bunnymen are surviving pretty well - older, wiser, con-

To the genre-hopping restless-ness and hard-edged irony cus-tomarily associated with New York's Downtown scene they add a funky edge that makes their music instantly accessible. But even when they're playing material by Prince or Smashing Pumpkins their jazz credentials are obvious. After all, the band's leader, slidetrumpeter Steven Bernstein. has contributed his unique sound to the music of Carla Bley and the New York Composers' Orchestra - as well as to the grungy organ-centred sound of Medeski, Martin and Wood. So he is just as happy to explore the cultured elegance of Duke Ellington as the tight funk of Sly Stone.

before alto saxophonist Briggan Krauss joined Bernstein in a wailing free-for-all over the pounding beat. Such sim-plicity — straightforward rhythmic riffs culminating in musical mayhem - formed the basis of the band's approach through both their subsequent sets, but the apparently uncomplicated nature of their sound concealed a mass of improvisational adroitness and considerable subtleties of dynamics and texture.

Much of this subtlety had its source in Bernstein's alternately woozy and strident trumpet playing, and in its contrast with Krauss's raucous abrasiveness, but a good deal was attributable to Wollesen. Scraped cymbals, added to Krauss's forays into stuck-pig squealing and Bernstein's smeared braying, brought an Mob's music at times, and the moaning sounds Wollesen produced from his rubbed drumskins took the New Yorkers' music about as far from the article usually referred to by the term acoustic jazz as it is possible to go.

The likes of Goldfinger, all dramatically smoothy trumpet and breathy alto, and a thundering visit to the Stones' Ruby Tuesday, proved perfect showcases for the band's irreverence, but it was their casually borne jazz-honed virtuosity that lifted Sex Mob's unequivocally enjoyable music way beyoud the realms of rude posturing suggested by their somewhat unfortunate name.

ATHLETICS: LONDON MARATHON GIVES HAILE'S OLDER BROTHER OPPORTUNITY TO QUALIFY FOR OLYMPIC GAMES

Gebrselassie seeks capital gain

By David Powell, athletics correspondent

THE Olympic champion will be on the starting line, so too will the world record-holder and the world champion. Yet, when the Flora London Marathon unfolds on Sunday, the athlele with the name that carries the greatest weight in distance running today - Gebrselassie - will not be up at the front. Or, at least, his coach hopes not.

Tekeye Gebrselassie, the older brother of Haile, makes his first appearance in the London Marathon in an attempt to earn selection for the Olympic Games, Peter Kortekaas, his coach, does not doubt that the "Run cautiously and qualify," Kortekaas will tell him. or go too fast and blow your opportunity." Not that Kortekaas is confident that his man will listen. Tekeye carries the weight of his brother's reputation with him. "Everybody says he is the brother of Haile and you can see it in the race. He goes off too fast."

The coach has set his athlete the task of breaking 2hr 11min 30sec, the Dutch qualifying time for Sydney 2000. While Haile remains the pride of Ethiopia, his brother acquired Dutch citizenship lası year. The important thing is for him to qualify for the Olympics," Kortekaas said. This he should achieve, according to Kortekaas, provided that he does not go off with the pacemakers with all the daring that has spirited his brother to 15 world records on the track.

"I would like to be there on a bike to keep an eye on him," Kortekaas added. "Like most Africans, you talk to him and say 'start easy, go in group two or three' and after the the first kilometre, you find him in group one. That is why I am careful to say what time he could run. I think he can run faster than 2hr 11min 30sec. but I am afraid he will start too quickly."

Haile Gebrselassie has run a marathon, but Tekeye holds the family record. Five years ago, in the Eindhoven Marathon, he ran 2hr 11min 45sec. while his brother's best is 2hr 52min, which he ran when he was aged 16. It is a marathon that Haile prefers to ignore: "My first marathon will be in Rotterdam in 2001," he has

Rotterdam is where you would expect Tekeye to be on Sunday, when the Dutch put on their marathon of the year. The flat course has proved to be an attraction for athletes seeking fast times and only last year Tegla Loroupe, from Kenya, set the women's world record there. Yet Kortekaas has put Gebrselassie on to the slower London course.

"In Rotterdam, all the other Dutch runners will be there trying to get the Olympic quali-fying time," Kortekaas said. "Some will start fast and, for Tekeye. London will be quiet, away from the publicity and pressure." That is being shouldered this week by Josiah Thugwane, the Olympic champion. from South Africa, Ronaldo da Costa, the world record-holder, from Brazil, and Abel Anton, the world

lum away from Ethiopia after races in Britain. Three years later, three of Gebrselassie's compatriots sought refuge in London the day after racing in the world cross country championships in Durham.

Only last month, two more Ethiopians deserted the team when the world cross country championships came to Belfast. "He does not like to talk about it, but he was supposed to go into the Army and that was not what he wanted," Kortekaas said. In the year that Tekeye deserted Ethiopia, Haile was winning double gold at the world junior championships and his emergence as an athlete of distinction over the next two years, together with the country's political changes, spared him the call from the Army.

For the past four months, Tekeye has been training with Haile in a small group of elite African athletes, just outside Addis Ababa. "It has been good for him to be home training with good runners. Tekeye lives in Holland and has a Dutch passport, but he still feels that Ethiopia is home," Kortekaas said, "He trains twice a day and lives only for running. He is always looking at his brother, seeing what he has done. He wants to do that, only in the marathon."

Tekeye had better jump to it. because time is not on his side. Haile takes up the distance in two years from now, when we may see the two-hour mara-

IN ICE HOCKEY: Ian Taylor, the chief executive of the Sekonda Superleague, has revealed that five potential buyers are ready to take over Sheffield Steelers, who went out of business yesterday. Taylor is to investigate the business credentials of all the prospective new owners of a club, whose financial problems have finally taken their toll.

SAILING: The attempt by Azhar Mansor, of Malaysia, to set a record for sailing solo around the world has ended after 69 days. His yacht's mast snapped in three pieces near Cape Horn yesterday. He set out on his journey of 26,100 nautical miles from Langkawi, a Malaysian island, on February 2.

GOLF: Lee Westwood's post-tournament celebrations at the Masters caused him to miss his flight to his next tournament. the Macau Open, which starts tomorrow. Westwood's 20-hour journey will hardly be ideal preparation for the Macau event.

teams for the international trial at New Lount, Leicestershire, next month prompted gasps of surprise from bowls followers, because the name of John Bell was absent from the 50-strong squad.

Bell, one of the great characters of the sport, made his first for his country in 1978 and has played in 21 consecutive series. The director of tourism for Carlisle, he has retired from international bowls at the age of 51.

"Physically, the old rugby war-wounds that savage knees and backs do not relent," he said ruefully. "Mentally, the easing of any determination to win and readiness to accept defeat are sure signs that the full spark required for top match play is not glowing so brightly."

In other words, he is now too old to cope with the hurly-burly of international competition in a sport that people used to take up in retirement. In the past 30 years, the average age national teams has gone down from the middle 50s to the late 20s.

Bell, an all-round sportsman who represented Cumbria at rugby and cricket, first qualified for the national championships as a teenager in 1966 and went on to win the England singles in 1983, pairs in 1991 and triples in 1976 and 1991.

He represented England in five world outdoor championships, winning the fours title twice — in 1964 and 1996. He also took part in the Common-wealth Games in Victoria and Kuala Lumpur.

His 67 appearances in the home internationals constitute a record that he shares with in second place, in the ranking list of England's most-capped players, behind the incomparable David Bryant, who played 81 times for his country on grass. Bell's retirement makes way for the introduction of Nicky Jones, from Bourne-

Offers flood in for Quinnell's robust service

By MARK SOUSTER

CRAIG QUINNELL will have no shortage of new emplayers from which to choose should he decide to leave Richmond when his contract expires this summer. Quinnell, 23, who played for Wales against England at Wembley. on Sunday, has been inundated with offers from clubs in England, Wales and France.

Mike Burton, Quinnell's agent, confirmed interest from Gloucester, Harlequins and Bristol, of the Allied Dunbar Premiership, Llanelli and Pontypridd, in Wales, and Bourgoin, of France. Burton said: "Although he is under contract at Richmond, because of the situation there with the administrators, he will be a free agent if things are not sorted out in Bourgoin have made the firmest offer to date, but one wonders whether Quinnell would want to play in France. If he has to leave Richmond, where is is said to be happy. he might opt to follow Scott, his brother, back to Lianelli.

One club that has not yet en-tered the bidding is Cardiff, whose chief executive, Gareth Davies, confirmed he is leaving the club at the end of June to concentrate on his new role as chairman of the Sports Council for Wales. Davies has been at Cardiff for five years and has been at the helm during the recent stand-off with the Welsh Rugby Union. He said yesterday: "It has certainly been a great experience. There have been many ups and downs, but I would like to think that Cardiff has played its part in moving the professional game forward.

Neil Jenkins, whose goal-kicking denied England a grand slam in the Five Nations Championship, will un-dergo a long-delayed shoulder operation today, which means that he will miss Pontypridd's match against Ebbw Vale to-night. His place goes to Ceri Sweeney, 18, the top scorer for Wales Under-19 in the recent FIRA tournament, Colin Charvis, who was injured in the tackle by Tim Rod-ber that later led to Wales's match-winning try on Sun-day, is doubtful for Swansea's SWALEC Cup semi-final against Cross Keys this Sunday. Charvis has a suspected fracture of the cheekbone which, if confirmed, will sideline him for a month.

Although Wales's victory ensured that Scotland won the championship at England's expense, Jim Telfer, the Scotland coach, believes that Clive Woodward's team has the necessary qualities to win the World Cup. Winning the competition is a realistic expectation for England and France if they can sort themselves out? Telfer said. "England have used the Five Nations as a stepping stone. They have already beaten South Africa and they win when it really mar-

Despite the remarkable turnaround in their fortunes. Telfer plays down Scotland's chances this autumn, despite having home advanatge in the pool matches. They start with a match against South Africa, the world champions, at Murrayfield, on October 3.

South Africa will be com ing off the back of the Tri-Nations Series and, once they get on to the world stage, they are very difficult to beat." Telfer continued. "We have improved since the autumn, so I am expecting a cracker." His one concern is the serious injury to Eric Peters. who is not expected to be fit until September after breaking a knee cap. "I hope the doctors are right and he will be ready by then,

Austin Healey, who ended an eight-week suspension by sit-ting among the Eogland re-placements for the international against Wales last Sunday, will return to action this evening in the bope of returning to the Leicester XV to play Saracens in the Allied Dunbar Premiership on Satur-day. Healey, who was banned after a stamping incident con-cerning Kevin Putt, of Lon-don Irish, will play for the Leicester second XV against Loughborough Studeots.

but he will be pushing it a bit to make the two pre-tournament games against Argentina," Telfer said.

Nigel Wray, who stepped down as chairman of Nottingham Forest Football Club this week, has reiterated his continued support for Saracens. "They are my first love." he said. "Rugby union is a game I played for 30 years. I will see the job through there." Pat Howard, now based in England, may get a call-up to replace Stephen Larkham, the injured Australia fly half. Rod Macqueen, the coach, said yesterday: "Pat is an option. there's no doubt about that, He's playing for Leicester, but he's still available to play for Australia."

However, Macqueen is also pleased with the progress of two other fly halves - Christian Warner and Nathan Spooner, of New South Wales and Queensland respectively. If their Super 12 form remains strong, they should get the nod ahead of Howard.

ACCUSTOMED to wearing a lovely summer frock for racedays, the July course at Newmarket yesterday shivcred through a raw afternoon of hail squalls and pale sunshine. At its conclusion, Valentine Waltz was still available at lo-I for the Sagitta 1,000 Guineas despite an emphatic success in the Shadwell Stud Nell Gwyn Stakes. All in all, Flat racing's headquarters could emerge from hiberna-tion to reflect, with Shakespeare, on "the uncertain glory of an April day". Conditions were bleakly familiar from the Craven meeting's usual home — over on the Rowley Mile. which is closed during construction of a new grandstand - but so are the sort of bright hopes inspired by the likes of Valentine Waltz. Three days here, followed by cards at Newbury on Friday and Saturday, provide the classic generation with a week either to blossom or be nipped in the bud.

In fairness to Newmarket. the paddock was girdled with a gorgeous bed of spring flowers and there was a corresponding bloom to Valentine Waltz, who has a pretty white heart on her forehead and evidently a brave one in her chest, too.

For much of the seven-furlong journey she was stuck on the rail behind Hawriyah, but when the leader drifted under pressure at the furlong pole she burst through under Frankie Dettori. Eating up the confident of her progress

Giggs has legendary status there for the taking by Stephen Wood

By Stephen Wood

RYAN GIGGS was always the harbinger of the phenomenon of young, celebrity foot. ballers that has characterised the decade. His early achievements were outlined in the first paragraph of one of his early literary works, My

It was 1994 and Giggs had still not come of age as a man. The Manchester United player is now 25 and the intervening years have since added more winners' medals to his cabinet, more modelling poses to his photograph albums and more money to his bank ac-

The achievements that lie in store for Giggs this season, however, are unparalleled, not just in his career, but in the his-tory of football. As United plough relentlessly on, Giggs could become a member of the first English team to win the treble of league championship, FA Cup and European Cup in one season.

In 44 days, United would have to negotiate successfully their way through 11 matches. Nevertheless, it is not wise to question Giggs's powers of endurance. He was the teenager that used to rack up 85 matches a season; the young lad who would, every weekend, play two games of football for Dean's Boys Club, in Manchester, one for Salford schoolboys and throw in a rugby

Since a decaying Ayresome Park hosted its final, cramped match four years ago, a season has never been concluded without some form of head-spinning activity. Player rebellion. outrageous new signings, promotion, relegation, periodic if unsuccessful — trips to Wembley; the Teesside air seems to come alive with vibrant controversy. This year, it appears, will be no exception.

Although their own league position is unusually static the prospect of silverware having long been dispelled, their safety was confirmed eight days ago - Middlesbrough are to be paid a visit by Chelsea tonight, heralding a month-long flurry that sees each of the FA Carling Premiership's three remaining championship contenders tread warily up the Al9. Bryan Robson has suddenly become a kingmaker. Leeds United, in fourth place, will also have a role to fill, given that they, too, face each of the teams immediately above them, although only Manchester United and BY GEORGE CAULKIN

Arsenal still face the daunting journey to Elland Road. It is Middlesbrough, where just one away victory has been forthcoming in the past 18 months that salvation or damnation will be garnered. In the short term, Chelsea have the greatest incentive win tonight, while Arsenal and United are otherwise engaged replaying their FA Cup semi-final, and they return to the head of the pack; lose or draw and the impetus begins to seep away. It begets a prominence that Robson relishes. even though many will suspect that his long-time alle-giance to Old Trafford might influence his stance.

Although he denies it, the Middlesbrough manager was the merest hint of an anti-Chelsea tone, it was another suggestion that Robson laid to rest. Twice, over the past two seasons, the Londoners have emerged victorious from finals of both domestic cup competitions, while Middlesbrough's 2-0 defeat at Stamford Bridge last September is regarded by players and coaching staff as a particularly effete perform-

However, what all three title contenders will encounter is a vastly different challenge from the sweet-flowing, brittle team that last took its place in the highest division. Irregular cameos from Paul Gascoigne aside, Robson's is now a collecove unit, modelled on fitness and experience, marshalled by Andy Townsend and Robbie Mustoe in midfield and by Gary Pallister, the former United defender, in defence. They may not be leading players, but they are certainly familiar with the glare of the

England need to rethink batting tactics

From Richard Hobson in Shariah

PRACTICE matches ahead of an important tournament must always be approached with a degree of trepidation. Fresh difficulties can arise as easily as existing problems are solved. England arrived here less than a fortnight ago with a batting strategy for the World Cup firmly in mind, but they return home today with the form of the top order a matter for serious concern. Even though earlier failures ensured that it would carry no bearing on the Coca-Cola Cup. the victory against Pakistan at the CBFS Stadium on Monday night provided considerable relief after seven successive one-day defeats stretching back to the Carlton and United series in Australia. Yet the 62-run win, however emphatic in the end, was gained despite another indif-

Vinod Kambli hit the winning boundary that gave India a sixwicket victory over Pakistan in the Coca-Cola Cup in Sharjah yesterday. Salim Malik and Moin Khan made battling halfcenturies for Pakistan, enabling them to reach a total of 205 from the allotted 50 overs. Both teams have already secured a place in the final on Friday, but were taking the dress rehearsal seriously.

et with the score below 100. Stewart, in particular, endured a lean tournament, scoring 42 runs from four innings. It is imperative that he spends time at the crease for Surrey before England gather at Canterbury on May 2 to begin training ahead of practice matches against Kent, Essex and Hampshire that precede the main event. He intends to play in at least one National League and one PPP Healthcare county championship fixture.

Our batting has not functioned as a unit and some people need runs under their belts," David Graveney, the chairman of selectors and tour manager. said. "Sometimes when we chase runs, the fragility of our batting becomes very evident, particularly when the opposition have top-class spin bowlers. We are not alone in finding it far more difficult to chase than 10 defend a total

England must decide how far to shape the batting order towards aggression in the first 15 overs, when only two fielders are allowed outside the 30-metre ring. Conditions helping seam and swing will militate against batsmen altempting to hit through the line and the selectors may revert to an orthodox batting order of Stewart, Knight, Hick, Thorpe and Fairbrother, rather than promote Flintoff or Ealham, when the World Cup begins against Sri Lanka on May 14.

Poor results in Sharjah reflected unease with the conditions and the handicap of batting second in the first three games. Some of the strategy, too, was questionable. To hold back Fairbrother to No 8 in the second game against India was a waste of the best one-day batsman in the side. The Indians assumed that he must have been injured.

Hoping to compete successfully against players at ease in extreme heat and experienced on low, slow pitches in the hope of stringing together a sequence of victories to raise confidence ahead of the World Cup always seemed to be over-optimistic. A second defeat by Pakistan might have removed all self-belief from a squad unhappy at the way the issue of contracts for the World Cup has been allowed to drift.

The assurance of Flintoff and return to fitness of Thorpe, who scored 79 and 62 in the last two matches, represent the most obvious benefits of the trip. Ealham recovered form to take four wickets on Monday, when he also scored an important 36, while Fraser returned to the side to restrict batsmen to three runs an over in the first half of the innings. Early fears that Mullally might have to miss the World Cup because of a side strain have proved to be unfounded.

"To have stayed in England at the mercy of the weather would have been counter-productive," Graveney said. "It has been a chance to get together and build team spirit. Regrettably, as far as that was concerned, the on-going spat about contracts has not helped at

The discontent that simmered throughout the trip was unleashed on Tim Lamb when the chief executive of the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) saw the players at the team hotel after the victory over Pakistan. The meeting lasted around two hours.

Although they seem certain to agree to the terms before the ECB deadline of April 26, it will be unnatural if resentment towards the board does not linger. As Graveney said, it has not been a happy squad going about its work.

Lord's, ladies and gentlemen

THERE was no need to panic after all. There was drama, but it came a couple of hours later than some of the crustier members might have imagined, when two claps of thunder chased off a snowstorm, Two hours earlier, with no more than a polite murmur of excitement, the 211-year male-only reign of the Long Room at Lord's came to an end.

Twenty-one women worship-pers claimed their pews among the throng of a hundred or so in cricket's most famous cathedral. Little matter that the sky was slate grey and the game doomed to a soggy end. Most of those who came did so to soak up the atmosphere inside the pavilion, not the action out in the middle, They started early, determined to enjoy the day. A group of four women, all holding blue Middlesex membership cards, flashed cameras and wide smiles as they stepped over the threshold. "I've been in the pavilion before to watch a University match," Hilary Bruce said. "My husband is a member, so I came as his guest. But the doormen are much less begrudging this time. I think they must have been sent to charm school.'

Julia Northover, a pensioner from North London, was inside early enough to claim the autographs of some of her heroes as they skipped up the steps after practice. "I did the tour of Lord's once," she said. "but this is the first time I've been in to watch the cricket. I'm a Middlesex member and

Winter's tale a familiar one

LORD'S (first day of four: Kent won toss): Middlesex have scored 16 for one wicket against Kent

SNOW, rain, bad light, lightning, thunder, a brief glimpse of sunshine - and hardly any cricket. For the opening day of the new seasoo at Lord's, it would have been unwise to expect a great deal more (Ivo Tennant writes). In the ten overs that were possible, Middlesex, who were put in to bat by Matthew Fleming, lost one of their openers.

Michael Roseberry, now back with Middlesex after four rather unproductive years with Durham, was bowled by a trimmer from Headley when a restart was made in late afternoon. There was some watchful defence from Langer, but that was about all. Kent have come up with a nickname for themselves in the forthcoming National League. The last side to do so, they are to be "Kent Spitfires" on account of the county's links with the Battle of hot-blooded female to disregard the dress code. There were no skintight leggings and not a bare shoulder in sight. Most women donned dark-coloured, conservative suits, though one bright red overcoat sent a zing of warm colour through the oil-painted reserve of the

Every layer was welcome for outside, a face-slapping north wind soon brought heavy rain. Even Father Time had to swivel away from the white-clad figures below. "The folly of man," he seemed to be whispering behind his stooped back, "trying to play cricket in April." Sure enough, the covers were soon on. Members and their guests shuffled out of the Long Room. A few sought the haven of the "gentlemen only" Bowlers' Bar, others were happy to share beef baps and chitchat in the Long Spending a penny did not, however, come as easily as it should. There was not a sign in sight, but three new toilets were located eventually near the dressing-rooms. The pine seats, hairspray and pink tissues were damning evidence. Lord's has opened its doors to welcome the ladies — and survived.

By Christopher Irvine

THE game's tentacles will reach six additional towns and cities in the second summer season of the highly successful Rugby League Conference (RLC), which should be receive a fillip from the appearance of London Broncos in the Silk Cut Challenge Cup final at Wembley before it starts on May 8.

At the launch of the 1999 season in London yesterday, Lionel Hurst, the RLC chairman, said that the appearance in the final at Wembley of Do-minic Peters, who played for West London in the Conference last year, and the addition by the Broncos of Darrell Griffen, the Conference young player of the year with Oxford, to its trainee programme, were "proof positive" of the game's growing national pro-

Rugby league's switch to summer has assisted the cause of expansion, with many rugby union players trying their hand at the game, Crewe, Derby, Nottingham, Wolverhampton, Hemel Hempstead and Manchester (formerly Tameside) have joined the list of places where rugby league has a foothold, which is consistent with Hurst's ambition of a club in every sizeable place in England within five years.

Twelve of the 20 clubs are setting up junior sections. which Hurst said was pivotal to growth, along with the Broncos "spreading the word" in the South. Coventry and Newmarket had applications deferred and five more have been received for next year. DCEN PECEIVED for NEXT year.

Butcher passes endurance test

By GEOFFREY DEAN

THE OVAL (Gloucestershire won toss): Surrey have scored 124 for no wicket against ANY reservations that Surrey's players held about a frosty week's physical train-ing with the Royal Marines in March ought to have been dispelled at a raw, gale-swept and virtually deserted Oval yesterday.

The hardship and foul conditions" of Lympstone - in the the words of the county's quarterly magazine - were ideal preparation for the 47-over endurance test that Mark Butcher and lan Ward survived vesterday. In beastly weather, where hail coated the outfield at lunch and fielders' whites flapped like sails in a force ten, the Gloucestershire players must have cursed the illfortune of Mark Alleyne, their captain, in winning the toss. The prospect of a stop-start day, with rain around demanded an insertion, but so little did the ball seam on the flat, true pitch, and so ably did Butcher and Ward play that a wicket never looked like falling. Not until the twentieth over was the bat beaten.

In short, it was far too cold for the ball to swing. Smith tried in vain to reproduce the lavish movement in the air of his last visit here two years ago, when Gloucestershire won comfortably. Lately, they have been Surrey's bogey team, with a thrilling victory against the odds at Cheltenham last year.

Butcher looked a class act in the earliest first-class century opening stand in the Oval's history. Only when he had reached 48 did he play and miss. He signalled his fifty. with a tenth four.

Ward, his fellow left-hander, also hit some fine sbots, driving solidly and pulling gamely. Fortunate to edge Ball just wide of slip when on 46, he reached a worthy halfcentury from 131 balls.

START the championship on April 13 and you get what you ask for. It was a three-sweater, three slips and a gully sort of day, limited to little more than 30 overs by bursts of rain and hail. Prichard sailed comfortably past his highest championship score of last season — an almost unbelievable 24 moving to his undefeated 43 with six fours, including some rasping square cuts and a short-arm pull off Chris Lewis to warm the blood.

ft was a commendable effort, for he had to battle his way past an early period of playing and missing against Michael Kasprowicz, his team-mate in 1994, as well as combating the movement off the seam gained by Lewis. For a long time, both he and Darren Robinson survived only precariously. James Whitaker, back from the knee injury that saw him miss every championship game last season, kept the Leicestershire warriors buzzing with determination during the four sessions of play.

SHEEHAN on BRIDGE

BY ROBERT-SHEEHAN, BRIDGE CORRESPONDENT

Maud Khouri and Lily Khalil are the anchor pair in the Egyptian Women's Team. They are a very aggressive pair who bid boldly and play well. Maud brought in the small slam shown below at a recently played teams match and earned her team 12 IMPs.

Contract: Six Spades by South. Lead: king of hearts.

South opened One Spade and West overcalled Two Hearts. North started with a cue-bid of Three Hearts showing a good spade raise but necessarily a heart control. Thereafter an aggressive auction led to the precarious slam.

Even if trumps divide evenly, there are only eleven top tricks: four outside the trumps, five trumps in the South hand and two ruffs in the North hand. One of the minor suits must be established. If the trumps are not so friendly something more will be required.

Recognising the need to start on establishing the clubs, Maud won the lead with the ace of hearts and played ace and another club. ruffing. A spade to the ace revealed the unfriendly break. Another club was ruffed, revealing that they were divided evenly. Now she played the ace and king of diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy, and ruffed a diamond. This was the position:

$1087 ♣ J94 ♥ QJ106 795 ♦ Q ♣ Q 8 C7 ♦ 94

Now, with the lead in dummy, she played a club. East ruffed with the nine of spades, declarer overruffed with the queen, ruffed a heart with the ten of spades and played another good club. She has not yet lost a trick. If East ruffs low, she will overruff, and dummy's king of spades is her twelfth trick. On the other hand, if East ruffs with the jack, declarer will make the last two tricks whatever East returns.

Spanish leaders

Hermanas, Spain passes its half-way stage, Michael Ad-ams, the Briosh grandmaster, and Vladimir Kramnik, the powerful Russian, share the lead on 314/5. After her win against Anand in the first round, Judii Polgar has plummeted with three losses. while Viswanathan Anand, widely tipped as a likely challenger to Garry Kasparov's world otle, is utterly languishing with two losses and no wins. Today's game is Adams win against the veteran Korchnoi.

Painful legacy of sporting life

MIDWEEK VIEW

have decided on reflecdon not to run the London Marathon on Sunday. Life is too short. certainly too short to risk shortening it still further with the damaging effects of sport. The London Marathon has become an annual celebration of a deeply old-fashioned view of sport, the idea that sport is somehow good for you.

On the contrary, sport is extremely bad for you and those who most stridently push the claims of sport as something essentially good are those that seem most obviously to be suffering from the manifold and various curses that the sporting life makes inevitable.

I think, on this occasion, we will let Jim Fixx - the father of the modern running boom. who dropped dead on a run in his mid-50s - rest in peace this once. There is plenty of compelling evidence without revisiting the end of poor old

Just about every half-decent story we get on the sports pages is a celebradon of the utter badness of sport. This week has belonged, in the face of hot competition, to the medical problems of Jose Maria Olazabal and his courage in overcoming them. The man was reduced to a shambling and, when no one was looking, crawling wreck. The problem was traced to his lower back, which is where golfers get damaged so often. Ask Seve, if you don't believe me, or my brother-in-law, who was reduced for a period to house-bound immobility after a merry hack around the local course.

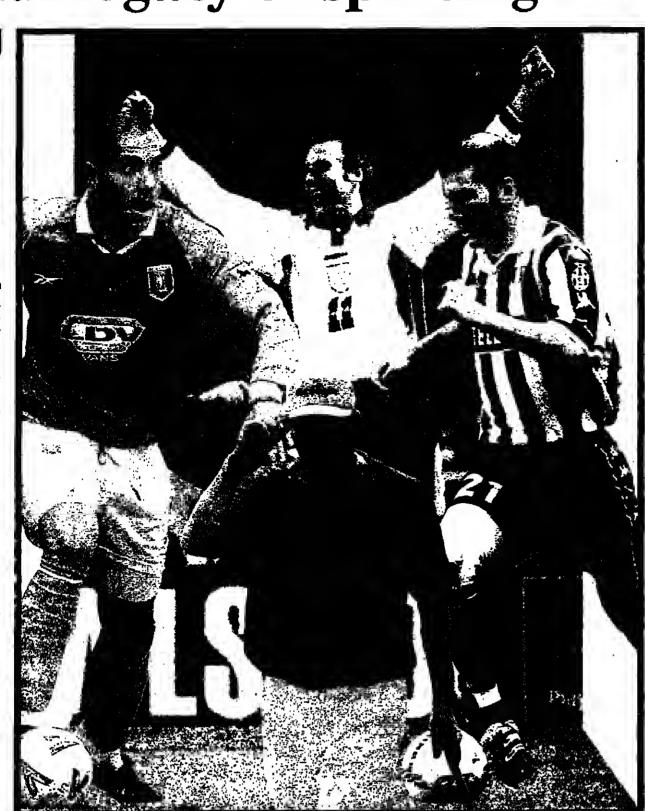

The on-again off-again story of the next seven days will revolve around the wounded knee of Zinedine Zidane. Zidane seems to be a man on the point of completing one of the great years of individual achievement in football, a World Cup win with France Juventus in their European Cup semi-final against Manchester United.

He was forced to limp off half way through his weekend game and now faces what we traditionalists call "A Race Against Time" to get fit for the second-leg of the United match a week today. Zidane injured the knee shortly after

The psychological wear and tear is as extreme as the physi-cal stresses. Players' minds and hodies are, like grand prix cars, stretched beyond the limits of reliability. So breakdowns occur again and again, every day. Poor old Paul Merson was in tears again last performance as substitute. He stands as a living example of the problems of keeping normality and the sporting life in balance.

Stan Collymore, his club colleague at Aston Villa, is a now famous example of a footballer with mental scars. Ronaldo was under such severe mental and physical glory and achievement. We ordinary chaps who do it just to keep fit are in a different category, but it doesn't stop sport being extremely bad for Training for the London Marathon - Everyman's Everest — is a classic example. Road-runners generally damage the knee joints and will pay for it later in life.

No one has ever confused me with a professional athlete. essor a damaged person. Right arm never quite right too much diving about as a goalkeeper and wicketkeeper, though I prefer to blame my one game of polo. And of late, I have been going through a period of some stress, and all sporting life and get down to a bit of hard graft. Sport is an appallingly stressful business. for mind and body alike, no matter what level you do it at. Few escape without some kind of long-running niggling, nagging ache and those who participate in it seldom do so without worry and care.

And that's why we like it. That's why we do it, because the stresses excite, involve, lift us. Stress is something we many people like playing sport and that is why we like watching it, the uniquely public and debilitating stresses of professional sporting life are what make people such as Olazábal and Zidane, Merson and Ronaldo, enthralling. Of course sport is bad for you. We wouldn't have anything to do

Top names bring fizz to Stella event

By Alix Ramsay, tennis correspondent

THE clay-court season has minute, depending on his hardly begun and already British thoughts are turning to the grass after Stella Artois announced the line-up for their traditional pre-Wimbledon event at Queen's Club. Tim Henman and Greg Rusedski will lead the British challenge. but their paths to the latter stages will be anything but clear with six of the world's top Il men commined to play.

Yevgeny Kafelnikov, the Australian Open champion and world No 3, leads the initial list of entrants, along with former Stella Artois champions. Todd Martin, conqueror of Rusedski during the Davis Cup in Birmingham two weeks ago, and Mark Philippoussis. Scott Draper, the defending champion. Michael Chang and Thomas Enqvist have also signed up.

Pete Sampras has, as is his wont, asked for a wild card to be reserved for him. He will leave his final decision about whether to play until the last progress in the French Open. This is the 21st year of the lournament and, with the millennium in mind, several young prospects of the ATP (Association of Tennis Professionals) Tour, such as Lleyton Hewitt. Marat Safin and Jan-Michael Gambill, will meet more experienced names, but while they have all either won a Tour event, beaten a top-five player or lasted glory in the Davis Cup, what they will make of grass beneath their feet remains to be seen.

For the first time, BBC television will screen all seven days of the event, while the centre court seaong capacity has increased to nearly 6.400. Should the weather be inclement, a raincheck system is in place offering ticket-holders a full refund should there be less than two hours of play. At the rain-soaked 1998 event, refunds cost the organisers nearly £1.5 million.

Living for Las Vegas

ITV. 9pm

As Julie Walters says to Brenda Blethyn at one As Julie Walters says to Brenda Blethyn at one point, this is like Thelma and Louise. But to its credit, it's not too much like that particular exercise in feminine fantasy. Instead, Kay Mellor's film is a rather grittler, more British affair. Best friends Blethyn and Walters share everything, even the six-figure jackpot at bingo which precipitates Walters leaving her husband to move in with the bingo-hall manager. Blethyn, meanwhile, pays off her mortgage but simultaneously finds that she has multiple cancers, for which the treatments seem worse than the fatal prognosis. Walters whisks her off to Las Vegas, where they meet rodeo-rider Kris Kristofferson, an apparent perfect rodeo-rider Kris Kristofferson, an apparent perfect last fling, thinks Walters, for Blethyn.

The Naked Chef BBC2.8pm

A new series from the makers of Two Fat Ladies. Jamie Oliver is a 23-year-old London chef whose presentational skills might be unpolished but whose skill and enthusiasm are undeniable. He may need prompting by an unseen female behind the carnera, but his grasp of the essentials of cooking is clear. He eschews fancy names and time-consuming techniques to bring adventurous yet simple cookery within reach of the viewer, both yet simple cookery within reaction the young and inexperienced, who can be intimidated by the bland assurance of the monstrous regiment of telecooks. His is a natural manner which invites you in rather than dazzling you with expertise.

The Unseen Royal Family

ITV, 8pm Not an expose of the farther reaches of the Civil List, mysterious cousins locked away in asytums or minor scions of unguessed-at hideousness, but a brisk trot through home movies, relatively rare footage of the Royal Family on parade or al ease, and eyewitness accounts of encounters with them. There's quite a bit about Diana, Princess of Wales,

Annual Agency Ag

but almost as much about the Queen, both as Princess Elizabeth and, touchingly, on her several visits to the stricken Welsh village of Aberfan. The Prince of Wales also gets a reassessment, as a decent sort, going out of his way to be fair and non-discriminatory. Some may feel that there is a little 100 much from Ivor Spence, a toastmaster and butler-trainer, but he's entertaining enough and he can genuinely claim to have had extensive acquaintance with the family of Windso rs.

Melt/The End of the World Radio 4, 11.30am/9pm

Today is not a good day on Radio 4 if you want to contemplate tomorrow with a smile on your face. Worse, there may not even be a tomorrow. This much can be inferred from the absence of a question-mark in the othe The End of the World. So, it's a statement of fact, not conjecture. The only unresolved element in John Gribbin's investi-gation is not if universal apocalypse comes but how it will come. Several doomsday scenarios are offered, including being pulverised by a gigantic asteroid and being barbecued by the greenhouse effect. Pete Lawson's noisy and frenzied comedy Melt opts for annihilation by nightmare heatwave in which Big Ben dissolves and becomes Little he first couple of para-graphs of this review have had to be smuggled past the news editor under the protection of large men with shaved heads because the news editor is not a person who likes to find himself trawling the back end of the paper of a morning only to encounter a world exclusive he has missed. CARLES DE LA COMPANIE

The startling revelation that Richard Branson does not carry the Prime Minister's telephone number about with him came in The Mission: The Great Balloon Race (BBCI) last night. It is hard to say whether this omission will do more harm to Branson or Tony Blair but what it does help to show is that Branson is a past master of public relations. The programme was not even about him, yet here he is hogging the headlines.

The programme was actually about the successful round-theworld-trip in March by Breitling Orbiter 3, one of the few balloons of recent years that has gone up without having Branson in it. In a way Branson played his part in the success, for had his last attempt at the record not ended in failure the Breitling trip would not have happened at all.

It was during the section about Branson that we learnt the shortcomings of his little black book. When Branson was trying to get permisssion to cross Chinese airspace he contacted his flight controller and told him to ring up Downing Street. As you do. There followed a bizarre exchange, during which Branson's staff had to be told that the best way to get a number for No 10 would be to ring Directory Enquiries. Still, eventually Blair was contacted and he faxed a letter to the Chinese and they in turn relented. Or, as my own man in Beijing put it: "Mr Brares barroon fliend fry over China, no plobrem." The plo-brem was, of course, to come near Honolulu, where Branson had to ditch last Christmas Day, leaving the way open for Breitling Orbiter 2 and its rival, the Cable and Wireless balloon. As with racing yachts and footballers, balloons now carry the romantic names of their sponsors. A modern Owl and his Pussycat would go to sea in a beautiful Heinz Peas multihull.

rian Jones and Bertrand Piccard, the crew of Orbiter 3, may not have possessed quite as much in the way of sparkling teeth as Branson but they come across as a couple of modest, dedicated heroes who, filmed at the moment they completed the record, embraced with the self-conscious awkwardness of men who would just as soon have been doing this without anyone knowing about it, but for the need for somebody with deep pockets. There is something inherently romantic about ballooning and the programme conveyed it well. Notwithstanding the fax machines, camcorders, e-mail and satellite telephones that are now de rigueur on such a trip, a balloon is a balloon and as such it has an imperious quality quite absent from any other form of transport. You feel that a balloon has a mind of its own, which in a way it does: it is called the wind.

and Piccard nearly died because something went wrong with the air-purification plant on board. Neither man realised what had happened for 24 hours though both felt breathless. They donned oxygen masks while the fault was sorted out.

The moment when they landed in the desert at the end of the trip was magical. They set up a camera to film themselves. There was nobody else present. Just them, the deflating balloon and the desert. They strolled about, laughing. Watching them, you felt almost as good as they must have done. Birds and other animals travel around the world without sponsors, unless you count the BBC Natural History Unit. But these creanires do have all sorts of fancy equipment given to them by nature. Supernatural: The Unseen Powers of Animals (BBCI) is

I had not realised until last a series that has so far been as fas-night's film that at one point Jones cinating for its filming techniques as any facts it has uncovered, but last night's Hidden Forces had fascination in both respects.

The subject was how creatures use senses to "read" the Earth's magnetic field and find their way around. There are some birds, for example, that have magnetic sensors in their retinas which "see" a coloured spot showing the position of magnetic north relative to its flight path. I have a daughter who could use one of those every time she gets in a car.

reen turtles, which return J to the very beach on which they were born 30 years earlier, use magnetised particles known as magnetite that measure the strength of the magnetic field and its angle to the Earth, thus giving the creamre something resembling Ordnance Survey map, only

I think this series has fallen too deeply in love with its own ability to get a camera up the nose of anything that swims, crawls, scuttles or flies, with the result that there were moments last night when I was diving for cover like Tippi Hedren in The Birds. That and the irritating music are the only downsides of a series that is otherwise exemplary.

The best character in last night's film was the orange ladybird. which ought to be given a job at the Met Office. The orange ladybird uses methods it has so far kept secret to predict whether the British winter will be severe or mild, thus enabling it to choose a hibernation spot that is either underground or merely sheltered. The ladybird has been studied for ten years and in every year it got the forecast right. Over to you, Michael Fish.

Petit returns from ban on red alert

By MATT DICKINSON

EMMANUEL PETIT insists that he will not optoe through his return to English football tonight, but then he has linle choice. Only one team can survive the impact when Arsenal and Manchester United collide in their FA Cup semi-final replay at Villa Park, so there will be no time for the Frenchman to make gradual reacquaintance.

"Don't watch it alone," was Alex Ferguson's advice and the United manager's warning raises the question of whether this is the ideal stage for Petit to reappear after his third suspension of a fractured and fractious season. The Arsenal midfield player, as he admitted yesterday, is incapa-ble of resisting a 50-50 tackle and there will be plenty of those against Roy Keane.

His desire to return has burnt so deep, though, that part of him secretly celebrated the 0-0 draw on Sunday and the opportunity of a replay. He is adamant that he has not only recovered peak fitness but also that he has banished the confusion that had made him question his future at Highbury. No, he said, he would not walk away from English football in the summer, as he had threatened in the immediate aftermath of most recent dismissal.

"It's true that I tried to give my shirt to the referee after the Everton match and said I was finished with the game here, but I will stay at Arsenal next season," Peol said. "I was very upset because I had just one red card in France in ten years and now I have had four in England, so you can imagine how I felt when I got the last one. I had made only two fouls in the whole game.

"II won't change how I play.

but it is very difficult for referees now in games with Arsenal. We are not a dirty team, but when there is a foul, the whole ground puts intense pressure on the referee and if he is not a strong man, he will give out cards."

Fears that Petit might use his repeated clashes with authority as an excuse to leave Arsenal for Spain or Italy had been widespread at Highbury. but Arsène Wenger appears to have used all his persuasive charms to lift his compatriot from his depression. "A com-petitive guy who does not have competition gets sick," the Arsenal manager said, "and Petit needs competition to be happy.

"I can understand why. when you are in a foreign country and you keep coming back and then getting suspended again, that life is very difficult. But the fans have done as much as me to persuade him A combination of suspen-sion and ankle injury has meant that Petit has started only two of the past 12 games and his return will compensate Arsenal for the likely absence of Marc Overmars, who will have a fitness test this morning on a sore ankle. Fred-erik Ljungberg, rather than Nelson Vivas, whose dismissal on Sunday spoilt an otherwise excellent display, is his probable replacement. Ferguson also hinted at changes yesterday, but it is unlikely that he will rest too many players until the FA Carling Premiership match against Sheffield Wednesday on Saturday. Paul Scholes may return in place of Nicky Butt, while Jesper Blomqvist is putting pressure on Ryan Giggs, but the defence is likely to remain unchanged, with Denis Irwin fit after sustaining an injury at Villa Park. The United attack must breach an Arsenal defence that has not conceded a goal for 673 minutes and Ferguson's strikers are not in prolific form. Dwight Yorke has not scored for six games and Andy Cole for five, which is a drought by their standards. However, Ferguson looked far from worried yesterday, shrug-ging off suggestions that his side's attempt at a treble may

Winter mocks early starters

SNOW, two inches of it, prevented any play at Chester-le-Street between Durham and Worcestershire yesterday as winter returned with a vengeance to bite into the earliest start to any county championship cricket season. Norman Gifford, the Durham coach, who has been involved at first-class level for 42 vears, was dumbfounded. "I have never seen snow like that on any English ground." he said. "When I arrived at 8.30am, everything was ready for a prompt start. Within two hours, the ground was comBY MICHAEL AUSTIN pletely white. I have seen April snow flurries, but they have always cleared quickly." As upset as anyone was David Measor, the Durham head groundsman, who had prepared bis first championship pitch since taking over from Tom Flintoft, who had been in charge since the county's elevation to first-class sta-

Ironically, in Durham's inaugural match that season, snow caused an interruption against Oxford University in the Parks, although the most famous modern instance of snow stopping play came in the game between Derbyshire and Lancashire at Buxton 24 years ago - but that was in

The late Ashley Harvey-Walker, of Derbyshire, handed his false teeth to the umpire because the pitch was becoming dangerous.

Not unexpectedly, there was also a blank day at Old Trafford, where Lancashire are playing host to Sussex.

CELTIC demonstrated their willingness yesterday to compete with the wealthiest clubs in Europe by securing Henrik Larsson, the leading goalscorer, on a new four-year contract. It will make the Sweden player the wealthiest in Celtic's history. Larsson, 27. has signed with the Scottish champions until 2003 for a reported salary of El.3 million a year, an act of faith by Celtic that is at odds with the club's tradition of being parsimonious.

Larsson's 37 goals this season had attracted widespread interest from around the Continent, including Tottenham Hostpur and Manchester United, of the FA Carling Premiership, who were all mindful that he was about to enter the last year of his existing contract.

For a club that has failed to retain any of its key players over the past two decades, the loss of Larsson would have been a blow that extended far beyond the pitch. It would have sent out the signal that Celtic, unlike Rangers, were still willing to cut corners

I had to instil order where there was perhaps a perceived disorder and Henrik is the foundation stone upon which I would like to build the team," Recent reports claimed that Larsson had been given a take it-or-leave it offer by Mc-Cann, which is not the way to approach the single-minded Swede. ## Bradley charged in racing inquiry

By Stewart Tendler and Alan Lee

AFTER two years of speculation and dramatic arrests by Scotland Yard detectives, involving a number of leading figures in horse-racing, a jock-ey was charged yesterday. The rider concerned is Graham Bradley, 38, the senior jumps jockey, who is accused of con-

He was released on police bail and will appear at Bow Street Magistrates Court today accused of preventing his mount, Man Mood, from winning a two-runner handicap chase at Warwick in Novem-ber, 1996. Man Mood, the 7-4 on favourite, was pulled up. A stewards' inquiry accepted Bradley's explanation that the horse lost his action due to a

Bradley has been charged under the Criminal Law Act 1977. He is accused of conspiring with others to win bets on the race by fraud and agreeing that Man Mood would not
